GOLF DREAM COMES TRUE FOR 13-YEAR-OLD CHAMP

When 13-year-old Dorothy Kirby defeated Margaret Maddox for the state women's golf title over Bob Jones' home course Saturday afternoon a dream which began on a Tom Thumb course two years ago came true.

Dorothy was 2 up over Miss Maddox, veteran city and state competitor, in a stirring match, details of which may be found in the sports section.

Two years ago Dorothy lived at her present residence with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Kirby, at 1055 Piedmont avenue, near the American Legion Tom Thumb course. One day following her dad over the miniature course, where her love for golf began—if miniature golf can be compared with the ancient and honorable game.

The idea of spunking a white ball over hazards and bunkers appealed to the 11-year-old youngster and she was soon found on a driving range on Collier road that Howard Beckett, Capital City Country Club professional, became interested in Dorothy. Beckett was impressed with the youngster's crude stance that bore earmarks of a champion in the making. And champion she is today at the age of 13 years.

Julian Kirby, Dorothy's proud father, made the contact with Beckett which has developed into a devotion that is shared by both pupil and teacher.

A brilliant future is predicted for the Atlanta star, who, students of the game believe, will reach the golf pinnacle reached by Alex Stirling, Atlanta girl who several times won the national women's crown.

Proved Apt Pupil.

"My first idea, when Dorothy came to me for instruction, was to teach her fundamentals of the swing in the most thorough manner possible," Beckett said. "She seemed to grasp all the fine points at once and I could talk with her just as I would a grown-up."

"She became so enthusiastic over the game that I was told on several occasions she practiced certain parts of the game for hours."

BIG LEAF ACREAGE CUT IS ASSURED

90 Per Cent of Flue-Cured Growers Have Signed Agreements.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—(AP)—J. B. Hutson, chief of the tobacco division of the farm administration, said today the signing by more than 90 per cent of the flue-cured tobacco growers of an agreement to reduce acreage had "assured that production can be effectively controlled."

Under the agreement, signed by tobacco growers in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Virginia and Florida, farmers agreed to reduce their acreage in 1934 and 1935 as much as 30 per cent. If necessary, below their average acreage for 1931, 1932 and 1933.

Preliminary returns received by the farm administration show that in North Carolina 55,771 agreements have been signed by growers. This represents 96 per cent of the flue-cured tobacco acreage produced in that state during the last three years.

In South Carolina, 11,202 agreements were signed, placing 95 per cent of the tobacco farmers under control. Georgia reported 8,372 agreements signed, representing 87 per cent of the growers and 80 per cent of the land suited for flue-cured tobacco.

Florida reported 585 agreements, representing 95 per cent of the flue-cured growers and their acreage.

Virginia reported 8,000 growers having signed agreements. This represents about 95 per cent of the production for the last three years.

With the preliminary reports on the acreage reduction at hand, the administration continued work on the flue-cured tobacco marketing agreement, which is designed to bring an average price of 17 cents a pound to growers.

Intervention by F.D.R. In Leaf Crisis Asked

RALEIGH, N. C., Sept. 30.—(AP)—Governor Ethinghaus today asked President Roosevelt to "intervene personally" in the tobacco price situation and insist upon immediate action to accomplish parity prices "to avoid results which it is difficult to forecast."

The North Carolina governor appealed to the president in a telegram which asserted "the situation challenges the power of the national government."

"Our people have every confidence in you," the telegram said, "and as their spokesman I am making this appeal to you direct because of the extreme importance of the situation and the possibilities involved. Immediate action is necessary."

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Inauguration of a complete tobacco grading service, free to farmers, on one of the large flue-cured tobacco markets in North Carolina is planned by the farm administration.

Greenville, Rocky Mount, Kinston and Wilson, the four largest flue-cured markets in the state, were asked today to advise the administration how much each would be willing to contribute toward defraying the cost of this service.

Hundreds of Dog Fanciers Attracted to Display Here

Excitement in the pedigreed canine world was registered Saturday when more than 50 dogs were assembled at an exhibition given by the Atlanta Kennel Club at the downtown store of H. G. Hastings & Co. in one of the finest collections of champions and their offspring ever shown in Atlanta. Coming on the eve of National Dog Week, October 1 to 7, the show attracted hundreds of dog lovers and fanciers. In the array were dogs who have won trophies and ribbons in national contests and puppies who are being groomed for future shows. Every one of the more popular breeds were shown—huge Danes, perky little Scottish terriers, dignified shepherds, lovable Saint Bernards, the wire-haired breeds, toy dogs, such as Pekingese and Pomeranians, and a large assortment of bulldogs and pugs.

In the windows facing on the side walk beside the store were more than 100 trophies and ribbons won in contests sponsored by the American Kennel Club. It was an array that brought a realization that Atlanta is a dog-loving town and the fact that some of the finest canines in the country are registered from Atlanta.

The showing Saturday was an informal affair, with no entry charges and no judging. It was for kennel club members only and the public was admitted to the show free of charge. A feature of the exhibition was a show given by Dane, huge great Dane trained by Benno Stein, Atlanta dog fancier. Her tricks included jumping through a fiery hoop and counting by numbers as they were shown by her trainer.

Another show for fine dogs will be given by the Atlanta Kennel Club next Saturday, when more than 300 fine dogs will be exhibited.

Inspired by their friend, the dog, children in large numbers are entering the five contests sponsored by The Constitution and several business firms to celebrate National Dog Week which begins today and ends next Saturday. Scores of photographs, poems, limericks and news stories have been received. Prizes in the contest were offered by Maier & Berkele, the Atlanta Veterinary Society, Miller's Book Store, Davidson-Paxon Company, Trammell Scott Company, H. G. Hastings Company, Schneider & Son, and Walther & Hood.

Illustrating the excellence of the material submitted is this limerick entered by a school child:

"My little dog is a very little dog,
But a great big dog to me.
He sits on a log
Like a good little dog,
And scratches every biting flea."

All contests are open to persons of any age except the poetry contest, which is limited to children under 16 years of age. An example of the clever verse being submitted in this contest is the following written by a child in the elementary grades of one of the city's leading schools:

"I've got a dog, a half-a-dog high,
But my mother says he's a sight.
With long floppy ears, eyes sad with
But he cares for me, alright.
We call him 'Weiner,' because he's lean.
Than any dog in town.
Some say he's lazy because his brain's hazy."

A committee was appointed to look after details of the association float and unit in the procession.

The first division will be made up of military and civilian conservation corps units, commanded by Colonel Thomas S. Moorman, commanding officer of the 24th infantry band, the regular army. In the division will be the 22d infantry band, the civilian conservation corps members from Varm, Spinks and Logan Springs, the 122d infantry band, the band of the Riverside Military Academy of Gainesville, the 114th hospital company, the 30th cavalry and the 45th pursuit squadron.

The second division will be composed of high school and other R. O. T. C. units, commanded by Major Trammell Scott. In this division will be the R. O. T. C. units of Tech High, Boys' High, Marist College, Georgia Military Academy, Fulton High and Russell High.

The third division, the school division, probably will be the largest in the parade. It will be commanded by Willie A. Sutton, superintendent of the Atlanta school system. In the division will be the Salvation Army band, the English Avenue Drum and Bugle corps, the city schools and school organizations.

The fourth division will be composed of various units and will be commanded by Jere A. Wells, superintendent of the Fulton county school system. In the division will be the Georgia Tech band, the county schools, the Augusta police band, the Parent-Teacher Association, private and parochial school children and Greek societies.

Officials in Fifth Division. The fifth division will be composed of state, county and city leaders, most of them on foot. It will be commanded by Mayor James L. Key, who will have for his aids Chief of Police T. O. Sturdivant and Chief of the Fire Department O. J. Parker, while the members of city council will march immediately behind the division commander. In the same unit will be bankers representing the First National, the Fulton National, the Citizens and Southern National and the Trust Company of Georgia, delegations representing the Atlanta newspapers, state, county and city officials, the police department, the fire department, the NRA campaign committee, allied organizations and floats representing business and industrial concerns.

The sixth division, which will be commanded by Charles R. Gramling, will be composed of labor organizations with a large delegation of the unemployed marching with them. The division will include the Firemen's band.

The seventh division will be composed of various organizations commanded by Major Joseph R. Cooke. In this division will be the Georgia Military Academy band, veterans' organizations and patriotic societies, the Yaarab Temple band and members of the patrol, fraternal organizations, the D. A. V. drum and bugle corps and relief associations.

The eighth division will be composed of negro organizations, commanded by W. M. Archer, Jr. In this division will be a band, graduates of Booker T. Washington High, Atlanta University, Spelman and Morehouse colleges, Clark University and the colored schools of the city.

There will be a great reviewing stand at the city hall where leaders will take their places as their bands reach that point.

The parade will disband at West Point, where the reviewing stand, immediately beyond the reviewing stand.

KEY POWER LIMIT BEFORE COUNCIL

Other Important Matters Will Be Considered at Session Monday.

Proposed limitation of Mayor James L. Key's power in appointment of 1934 committees as recommended by the ordinance committee will be the major matter council will face at its regular monthly meeting Monday, it was indicated Saturday.

Among other important matters demanding consideration will be the following:

1. Provision of the city's $75,000 share of the $150,000 necessary to obtain $300,000 for the remaining quarter of the year from the federal government for relief purposes.

2. Consideration of an October finance sheet, which the finance committee is slated to act on at a meeting scheduled for 1 o'clock Monday afternoon, an hour before the council session. It developed Saturday that no adjustments have been recommended in salaries of employees because of the additional demands for relief.

A demand by Alderman-elect Ellis B. Barrett for a council committee probe into alleged illegal activities of city attaches in preparing for the municipal primary September 20.

4. Proposal by the Albert Steiner cancer clinic board of trustees to bar private practice of medicine by doctors on the Steiner, Grady, Emory University or Emory University hospital staffs.

5. Recommendation of the public health committee that the city hall be closed at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon of all days except Saturday. The committee will open the city hall at 8 a. m. and allow employees 45 minutes for lunch, if council approves the measure.

6. Proposal by the tax committee to secure an additional $300,000 annual income from intangibles. The problem has been under consideration since the city is anticipated that out-of-town experts will be retained.

The measure designed to restrict Key in selection of committees was destined to meet stiff opposition in council, it was indicated Saturday.

The ordinance, championed by Councilman Joseph E. Burnett, provides that all major council committees shall be composed of one representative from each of the 13 wards. Many of them now have only five members.

A provision is that the mayor shall not appoint any member of council on more than one committee. One of the four groups into which the 12 committees are divided and another would prevent him from assigning any member of council to more than four of the major committees.

Key's friends plan a concerted attack on the measure, which they contend would hamper the mayor in assigning of valuable members to various committees.

Dog Which Saved Boy From Snake Adopts Five Waifs of Canine World

Another story of a dog's devotion to man and to her own kind came to light Saturday when the latest exploit of Lady, a thoroughbred German shepherd dog, was related by Frank Shipp Sr., her master. Though she has puppies of her own her mother heart went out in sympathy to waifs of the canine world and she has adopted five other bairns.

Mr. Shipp was hunting doves on his estate near Avondale last week when he heard the feeble cries of puppy. Investigating, he found a tiny dog, apparently abandoned. Lady was so enthusiastic about the pups that Mr. Shipp carried them to his home and turned them over to the canine mother.

Immediately she began her efforts to restore the starving puppies to health. She encouraged them to drink her milk and gave each and every one a thorough bath with her tongue. The new arrivals thrived and Saturday they were reported as completely restored to health. Lady, Mr. Shipp said, seems to love her adopted puppies as well as her own four babies.

Only a few days ago Lady got her picture in this newspaper with a heroic act that saved Frank Shipp Jr., 10 years old, from probable death. A copperhead, highly venomous snake, leaped at the boy as he played near his home and the dog thwarted the reptile by jumping between the snake and the boy and taking the fang wound in her mouth. For hours she was near death but quick work by a veterinarian in administering anti-venom serum saved her life.

F. D. R. ARRANGE FOR JOBLESS

Food, Clothing and Fuel To Be Provided Quick for Needy Families.

By FRANCIS M. STEPHENSON. HIDE PARK, N. Y., Sept. 30.—(AP)—President Roosevelt arranged today for food, clothing and fuel for the unemployed through the winter as he completed his round of recent talks with government heads looking to the next stage of the recovery effort.

Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, left the Roosevelt home with the declaration:

"The president is determined to take care of all dire necessity." He said this means the obtaining of food, clothing and fuel for the unemployed through the winter as he completed his round of recent talks with government heads looking to the next stage of the recovery effort.

F. D. R. AT WORK ON SOUND MONEY

Henry Bruere Is Report ed Selected as Financial Adviser to President.

By RICHARD L. GRIDLEY.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—(UP)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—(AP)—New government steps to re-establish the country's credit system on a normal basis and to restore confidence in the dollar were believed near to night.

With rumors persisting of another personal appeal to the public by President Roosevelt regarding his banking and monetary program, it was learned today that Henry Bruere, one of the country's leading bankers, had been selected by the government

Bruere, a sound money man, head the Bowery Savings Bank, of New York, the largest institution of its kind in the United States. His son indication that the government would steer clear of drastic currency inflation as a part of its program.

Bruce will serve temporarily as special assistant to Director of the Budget Lewis Douglas, who is credited with leading the fight for government economy and a sound money program.

Bruce's selection revived rumors of an impending devaluation of the gold content of the dollar and early stabilization of the currency in terms of commodities or gold.

Former Roosevelt's closest financial advisers, however, are still in doubt as to what steps would be taken.

Another Big Opening.

Many, many years ago, when some of the experts now playing contract were handling raffles instead of duplicate boards, there was in Atlanta a bridge teacher. Her name was Mrs. Annie Adair Foster. She was a pioneer in her profession in this city and like a great many pioneers was a good one.

For 10 these many years she has been teaching bridge and making friends and being loved by all who know her. When duplicate hit the south she was one of the first to hold tournaments in Atlanta. She is still teaching and still holding tournaments and doing both in an efficient, delightful manner.

Miss Annie, as her host of friends like to call her, has moved her home to the Biltmore hotel. On Wednesday evening of this week she is going to hold her official opening in her new quarters and you can take it from one who knows, it is going to be a great tournament. Every bridge player of note in the city will be there and many novices. Only a few can win top score, but all can, and will have a most delightful evening.

In the Biltmore hotel, Mrs. Foster has selected a most charming, comfortable and convenient location to hold her tournaments. Her quarters for holding same are beautiful and are large enough to accommodate any number of players. For Wednesday evening it is expected that two sections will be filled.

While the Wednesday evening tournament will mark the official opening of Mrs. Foster's new bridge emporium, it will not be the first as her Tuesday afternoon tournament will be held there as usual. A change in hour of both tournaments will be made. The Tuesday afternoon tournament will begin at 2:15 o'clock and the Wednesday evening tournament will start at 8:15 o'clock.

Terrace Club Series.
Starting Monday evening the Terrace Club will hold a ten-series tournament for a handsome trophy known as the Ford dealers cup. This trophy was donated by the following Ford dealers in Atlanta: Ernest Beaudry, C. E. Freeman, Robert Ingram and Central Motors. It is a large and very beautiful cup and will certainly inspire the bridge talent to do its best to win it.

The scoring in this series is as follows: First place in any tournament is awarded seven points; second place gets five points and the next four places are scored in reverse order of finish, the sixth place getting one point. Competition promises to be very keen in this series.

Purely Personal.

Don Daniel went to Augusta Monday to spend the week with Billy Barrett. Billy wants to get in plenty of practice with him before the team-of-four match against Henry Chanin and a mystery team which Henry has formed. Don and Billy also will play as partners in the Vanderbilt cup tournament in New York in November. Mrs. J. T. Daniel and the writer will form the other half of the team. We travel to the big town in one of Billy's highpowered cars. The transportation problem having been solved, I am now devising ways and means to eat one meal per day and do without sleeping while away. The parks close in November in that city to those who seek slumber in their confines.

Did you know that the winter championship of the American Bridge league is played in Cincinnati in December and that at least a dozen players from Atlanta will likely be among those present?

Why does not West End start its popular tournament? Everyone enjoyed going out there and the affair was looked upon as one of the most delightful of the week.

The Cavendish is going to start a real team-of-four tournament at an early date. These tournaments proved very popular at that club, but quieted down during September. With the return of fall you can expect to see at least eight teams out at every tournament.

Understand Mrs. McDaniel, the popular hostess at the Georgia Bridge club, is going to start a weekly team-of-four tournament. She will start winter at her home on Juniper street and all enjoyed it very much.

The question often arises concerning this and that player's ability at the contract table. Now you may be surprised, but did you know that certain players do better against tough opposition, while certain other players are at their best against goat players. By a goat player I mean a very mediocre player. The name is slightly more refined than "goat," a name very popular in the east, and is considered a better adjective than "dog," a term often given to those players who still have much to learn, who are in the unfortunate class of never being able to learn.

The three greatest players to handle goats that I have ever seen are John Hardisty, Billy Barrett and Fred Shaefer. These three have the happy faculty of getting the most out of their partners or of taking charge of them in such a manner that the goat never knows he is being taken charge of. There are certain well defined rules that have to be followed in handling goat players.

The first is never try to do any scientific bidding with them. If the goat opens with a diamond or club, immediately bid three notrump and pray that the bidding will die at that figure.

Hardisty is really the superior of Billy and Fred at handling goats. His method is frank, direct and simple. He never tries, or wants, to get to a slam. He wants to guide the bidding in such a manner that he can play the hand. He is a fine player of the hand and can pick up many a trick that his goat partner might drop. He also has the advantage of having two goats opposed to him and on tight hands the defense will likely slip.

Slams are disregarded because of the direct and breezy bidding and because he really figures that what is most important is to get those two games home. If the two goats opposed to him bid slams he stands a good chance of defeating the contract. It is a most successful manner of attack in goat games.

Fred is more gentle with his methods and by his pleasant manner toward the goats and his utter lack of criticism he inspires them to raise their game. He is very careful, however, to see that he plays most of the contracts. The results are favorable to the house of Shaefer.

Billy is an artist at handling them. He combines lack of criticism plus an assumed enthusiasm for the goat's game that at times reaches the heights of genius in its sheer audacity and brazenness. Many a time in the old days in New York I have seen Billy in the most guileless manner praise the game of some most miserable goat when said goat was his partner. A few minutes later when the goat had cut against Billy, the latter was urging him to bet extra. The remarkable part of the whole record affair is that he generally persuaded the unhappy goat to bet him. Thus did the Barrett fortune grow by leaps and bounds. But Billy admitted to me some weeks ago, in a moment of confidence, that in Hardisty he had found a master at handling goat players. Thus endeth the lesson. In a future article I will tell you about some of our best players who are at their worst in goat games.

Atlanta Music Notes

By MOZELLE HORTON.

Mrs. John Felder and Mrs. Harold McKenzie have joined their talented faculties in planning the programs to be given for the Atlanta Music Club by Atlanta artists this season. Mrs. Felder being chairman of the evening programs, of which there will be ten, each one followed by a reception afterwards, and Mrs. McKenzie is chairman of the morning and, of course, concentrating on her teaching.

Vinnie Ream Boyd spent the summer studying at the University of Michigan and at Martha's Vineyard, later visiting the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago. She has reopened her studio and is already actively engaged in the new season's work. Vinnie Ream Boyd, or Mrs. John Boyd, is the former Mrs. Fred J. White. Her readings of one-act plays are famous throughout the city.

Walter Herbert has reopened his vocal studio in Wesley Memorial building, and has interesting plans for the year, both for himself and for his pupils. Mr. Herbert gives frequent radio programs, and his baritone voice is well known throughout the south.

"A Glimpse of the Human Side of Musical Personalities," the little column found on this page, was created to present interesting facts about Atlanta's well-known musicians. Visiting artists are interviewed and stories written for their adoring public to read. But the public is left in curiosity about its own performers. It is the desire of this feature to satisfy this curiosity about the personal life of Atlanta artists that we know and hear perform often, yet whom we do not know at all. Other sketches will appear from time to time.

Ruth Martin will open her studios of dancing and expression in two locations, Monday, October 2, at the Lovett school and at the Wynne apartment hotel. Her studios offer to pupils all the different forms of dance technique, including plastics and corrective exercises, and elementary expression with French conversation and spontaneous pantomime and dramatization. Music appreciation and creative dancing is also stressed. Mrs. Brooke conducted dancing classes for the Highland School Summer Activity program during the summer. She also had private classes combining dancing and swimming. After her summer classes she enjoyed a trip to Chicago.

Mrs. John Felder.

Mrs. Howard Claude Smith Jr., president of the club, has announced that membership to the club may be obtained at Cable Piano Company during the week of October 9-13.

The chairman for the house and receptions for the season is Mrs. Waldo Gettinger, and on her committee is Madeline S. Candler, Dobbs Jr., Lee Edwards, Charles Hartsfield, T. Stanley Perry, Florence Drabble, Frank Eastman, Willis Anderson, Ed Dandford, Fred Thomas and Miss Hazel Roy Butler. Hostesses to guest artists will be Mrs. Hal Davidson and Mrs. Alex King Jr.

Giovanni Martinelli, tenor, and Gladys Swarthout, mezzo-soprano, both famous personalities of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will give a joint recital on Friday evening, October 20, to mark the opening of the brilliant season of concerts being presented in Atlanta by the All-Star Concert Series in collaboration with the Atlanta Philharmonic Society.

Martinelli, one of the world's greatest tenors, has been a star of the Metropolitan Opera Company for 20 years, and has sung many times with that company in Atlanta. His return will be one of joyous musical celebration. Miss Swarthout is one of the youngest and most beautiful of opera singers, and the success that she has enjoyed, both in the operatic and the concert field, has been unusual. A feature of the program will be several operatic duets.

Mrs. Armand Carroll, as chairman of music extension in the Atlanta Woman's Club, called her committee together at the club last Wednesday morning, and formulated plans for a series of programs that will bear the interesting general subject of "The Arts As They Are Reflected in Life." The unusualness of the subject and the interesting manner in which it is to be presented, every third Wednesday morning in the month at 10:30 o'clock in the club auditorium, should attract every member of the Atlanta Woman's Club, for it is designed not only for the enjoyment of the musicians in the club, but for all members of the Woman's Club.

Earle Chester Smith spent the summer exploring interesting places in Georgia. Mr. Smith says that he had spent 10 years in Georgia and had never seen the mountains of north Georgia, for when vacation time came he had always traveled to the east, or the north, or the west. But he declares that he enjoyed the derived from the Georgia mountains surpassed any other vacation. He taught practically all summer, managing his trips over week-ends and odd days. His pupils for the summer numbered some from Florida and Louisiana.

Elizabeth Hopson visited both the seashore, Jacksonville Beach, and the mountains, Bristol, Tenn., and Asheville and Blowing Rock, N. C., between the close of the conservative summer school and the opening of the fall session. Since her return she has composed two new teaching pieces that are not yet off the press. She plans to spend her winter practicing for concert playing, composing.

Glimpses at Human Sides Of Personalities in Music

By MOZELLE HORTON.
When Enrico Leide lifts his baton this afternoon to signal the opening attack for the first concert of the reorganized Atlanta Symphony Orchestra in the Buckhead theater, few people in the audience will know that he made his debut as a conductor as Sing Sing S. S. that is, they will not know it unless they have read this story.

As everyone knows, "Sing Sing" is synonymous with the town of its location, Ossining, New York, and it was here that Enrico Leide waved his first baton. This little town of ten or twelve thousand inhabitants possesses a beautiful opera house, in which the San Carlo Opera company was giving performances back in 1915. At that time Leide was a professional cellist in New York city. One morning he was called over the telephone at his home and asked to conduct for the opera "Il Trovatore" that evening. The conductor being ill, Leide had never even held a baton in his hand, but his excellent musicianship served him well, and without rehearsal he conducted the principals, the chorus, and the orchestra without missing a cue. The result scored him a triumph that led him to following conducting as a career. He has perfected himself in this line, and today he is conducting the entire program from memory.

Almost an accidental success in becoming a conductor was the turn of Fate that made Leide a professional musician. His father had given him an excellent education at a university to become a professor of modern languages. He had studied music as an extra subject. And his homelike personality served him well, and without rehearsal he conducted the principals, the chorus, and the orchestra without missing a cue. The result scored him a triumph that led him to following conducting as a career. He has perfected himself in this line, and today he is conducting the entire program from memory.

When the Howard theater (now the Paramount) opened in Atlanta, S. A. Lynch, the owner, offered Mr. Leide a contract to come and conduct the orchestra. Leide liked the south so well that he has been here ever since—13 years.

He has two children, William, a successful young broker, and Rosebud, graduated last year from Washington University. Mrs. Leide and Rosebud are still on a sabbatical leave in Italy this summer and autumn.

Mr. Leide's only hobby is training his pet fox terrier to do tricks. He is not a sportsman, does not play golf or any of the sports, but he declares that he is going to take up bicycling right away. He expects in the future to ride to his rehearsals on his bicycle.

SIGMA PI ALUMNI
WEDNESDAY NIGHT

A banquet will be given by the Atlanta Alumni Association of the Sigma Pi fraternity at the Atlanta Athletic Club on Wednesday evening, October 4, at 6 o'clock, in honor of the active members and rushers of the Emory University chapter. This event will assemble some of Atlanta's most prominent businessmen as well as outstanding men on the Emory faculty, who are members of Sigma Pi.

Acting as toastmaster will be James V. Carmichael, past president of the Emory chapter. Other after-dinner speakers will be J. C. Ward, president of the Emory chapter; Ben Johnson, chairman of the pledging committee; and Frances Miller, assistant dean in charge of freshmen.

Sigma Pi fraternity was founded in 1807 at Vincennes University, Vincennes, Ind. Since that time the fraternity has pursued a policy of conservative expansion, always selecting colleges and universities of high standing for its chapters. Today, Sigma Pi has some 20-odd chapters scattered through the United States. The members of the active chapter at Emory includes the following: William Agnor, of Lexington, Va.; Jack Barker, of New York; J. V. Carmichael, of Marietta, Ga.; Russell Grove, of St. Louis; J. C. Ward, of Marietta; G. D. Wood, of Floyd, Va.; and John Rooper, W. E. Barfield, Bevo Coleman, Sidney Smith, James Watkins, Tom Simmons, Palmer Smith, A. B. Padgett, Lamar Benli, Louis Yancy, John Johnson, Graham Green, Henry Ragland, Fred Ragland, Cleve Rumble, Rex Hutchinson, James Chambers, Frank Parish and P. A. Redmond, of Atlanta.

Mr. Agnor's compilation showed that there are 24 alleged murderers now in jail awaiting trial. Only two of them are white, both of these women, Peggy Monroe and Rachel Long. Their cases are scheduled for trial during the week of October 16, when the solicitor-general plans to put up a number of other murder case defendants.

INCREASED DEMAND
UP THROUGH STATE

The hog business in Georgia is looking up. J. R. Greer, director of the state bureau of markets, said today that the highest prices of 1933 had been paid during this week for hogs sold in Georgia.

The bureau was advised of a sale at Statesboro at $4.71, the peak price of 1933. Greer said. This contrasted with the low of $2.225 at Blakely on January 25.

The bureau director said that while the government's purchase of pigs and sows probably helped some, he thought the main reason for improved prices was a better demand within the state. Greer said he had not been advised of Georgia's quota under the federal government's pig and sow-purchasing plan, but from reports he had received, believed it was not large enough to boost prices immediately.

COHEN, ART CRITIC, LECTURES TODAY AT HIGH MUSEUM

Max B. Cohen, who is affiliated with the Ringling museum and school at Sarasota, Fla., will deliver an address on "Art Appreciation, or Art as Applied to Everyday Life" at the High Museum of Art at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

On exhibit at the High museum are paintings by Wilbur G. Kurtz portraying the old south, particularly Georgia. Especially interesting are the paintings entitled "Whitehall Tavern," "Aunt Judy and Uncle Jake," "On the Road to Market" and "The Cotton Press," which recapture the spirit of ante-bellum days in Georgia and Atlanta. The painting, entitled "The Cotton Press," depicts an antique press located at Ellijay, Ga., which is one of the few remaining in the state.

The exhibit was placed on view September 15, and will close October 15. The museum is open from 2 to 5 o'clock on Sunday, and from 9 to 5 o'clock on week days.

Captain Hayne Ellis, U. S. N., To Be Navy Day Speaker Here

Dinner Arranged for Annual Observance on October 27; Ellis Heads Intelligence Division.

"A Treaty Navy—Fully Manned" is the theme for the national observance of Navy Day, which Atlanta will observe on October 27. Captain Hayne Ellis, United States Navy, will come to the city to make a special address.

Captain Ellis will speak over the radio from station WSB following a special Navy Day dinner in honor of the occasion and at which all naval officers, United States Navy, reserve officers and marine corps officers will be present.

Plans for Georgia's observance of Navy Day are under the direction of Lieutenant Commander Jesse Draper, U. S. N. R., who, in addition to holding a commission in the United States naval reserves, is naval aide to Governor Eugene Talmadge. Mr. Draper has been named state chairman for Navy Day and will be aided by members of the Navy League here, as well as all regular and reserve officers in naval organizations in the city. More definite plans for the state-wide observance will be announced at a later date. It is probable that Savannah, as has been the custom in the past, will have a special program on the 27th.

Each year the Atlanta navy men invite a prominent speaker to attend the dinner here and to address the public over the radio. In the past some nationally prominent naval officers have appeared in Atlanta, including Admiral J. J. Raben, commandant of the sixth naval district, at Charleston, S. C.; Admiral Hugh Rodman, U. S. N. (retired), who commanded the entire American fleet during the World War, and Admiral Newton McCully (retired), former commandant of the navy yard at Charleston. Last year the colorful Captain Rufus Zogbaum, U. S. N., commandant of the navy yard and naval air station at Pensacola, Fla., was the principal speaker.

This year's speaker, Captain Ellis, is head of the office of naval intelligence, one of the most important branches of the navy. The work of this department is of utmost importance both in peace and war times, and Captain Ellis is, of course, especially fitted to speak on the subject of a treaty navy. He has close contact with newspapers and other public relations media, and as it is a part of the function of his department, makes it a special point to bring the contact of the navy and the public as close together as possible with a more thorough understanding of the navy's problems and the needs for a full strength treaty navy.

$480,000 Is Expended For Relief in State

Nearly $480,000 was spent on federal relief work in Georgia during August, Miss Gay Shepperson, executive secretary of the Georgia relief commission, announced Saturday. The relief went to 68,521 families and to 4,908 single persons.

In some instances, direct and work relief was provided within the same family.

Single persons to the number of 4,908 were given direct or work relief, in addition to $2,733 spent for relief of 1,973 transient persons. The total amount of relief and administrative costs was $479,818.44, of which $22,888.02 was obligations incurred from local public funds, and $456,930.42 from federal funds.

Disbursements were made to 111 counties during the month. The cost of direct relief was $5.42 per family, or $1.38 for each person represented; work relief, each family, $9.09, or $2.15 per person represented.

Sunday Motorists Supply List Of Accidents in Monday's News

Off to the road again today for a trip with the family to the country. This is Sunday, and nearly every person goes out in his automobile and takes his family with him on Sunday. That's what you will be doing, and what will it mean? For many the inevitable heavy traffic of Sunday will result in the customary things—accidents, deaths and injuries which you will read about in Monday morning's paper. Maybe you'll come back safely, but it is your solemn duty to protect your own income against abrupt halt and to safeguard the financial security of those who are dependent upon you against this great common peril. A train wreck, a crash of automobiles, the speeding wheels of an on-rushing car, or a burning building, may leave you the victim of the ever-growing wave of accidents today. The insurance offered you through The Atlanta Constitution is issued by the North American Accident Insurance Company, of Chicago, Ill. This company, during the last several years, has paid to Constitution subscribers and members of their families over $160,000. The insurance is offered to subscribers and immediate dependent members of a subscriber's family between the ages of 15 and 69 on the one subscription going into the home at the small registration fee of 20 cents with application and 10 cents per month thereafter in addition to the subscription price, or $1 each per year in advance, to subscribers who live in Atlanta; and to subscribers outside Atlanta and suburbs the rate is $1 per year per policy in addition to the subscription price. The policy The Constitution offers you provides for payment of sums ranging downward from $10,000 for travel, $1,000 for auto and pedestrian accidents, heavy sums for permanent injuries, and $10 weekly indemnity for total disability resulting from accidents set forth in the policy, which is at the rate of $43.33 per month.

All this for the small fee, as stated above—just about 2 1-2¢ a week, and it is offered to old and new subscribers alike. In sending application for insurance, the applicant must state name in full, give age and occupation, and if beneficiary is desired the full Christian name of beneficiary must be given and relationship of same to the insured.

Over Seas

By BYRON DARTON.
Associated Press Cable Editor.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Austrian politics these days present a somewhat jumbled picture of an overturned cabinet, squabbling nazis, socialists and Heimwehrmen and much talk of whether fascism has taken root and a German rapprochement is near.

The barely 5-foot tall chancellor, Engelbert Dollfuss—described by jokers recently as pacing back and forth under his bed each night because of his political worries—assumed five cabinet portfolios in the cabinet realignment. Party politics were blotted out.

The political wise at once said in effect: "Fascism; he's trying to emulate his friend Mussolini."

There seemed some truth in the statement, for the fascist Heimwehr, long the government's strongest supporters in its long battle against the nazis, had a hand in forcing the issue. Prince Starhemberg, the young Heimwehr leader, recently had come from his ducal land with the flat assertion a fascist state was Austria's need.

It also was true the diminutive chancellor and the Italian leader at least are well acquainted, if not close friends. Several times within recent months Dollfuss had gone to Italy to talk with Mussolini. The last time he hoped down to Riccione, Italy, caught Mussolini in his bathing suit on the seashore and spent most of a Sunday afternoon talking over European matters in a boat pulled out of range of eavesdroppers.

Whether it does have attempted to be a teacher in the ways of fascism and whether Dollfuss has become an eager pupil remains to be revealed.

Dollfuss, however, will not admit the current Austrian government is a fascist setup. "There is deep wisdom in the words that Mussolini fascism is no export article," he replied when asked a question along that line.

The new cabinet was not a week old when Emil Fey, who shared Franz Winkler from the vice chancellery in the new lineup, announced the setting up of "compulsory detention" places for persons suspected of harboring evil thoughts against the regime. They will be somewhat like the "concentration camps" for political offenders across the German border. It was no secret the inhabitants would be recruited from the nazi and socialist ranks.

Dollfuss and his government made the nazi illegal several months ago, raising the ire of Hitler followers both at home and abroad. Now the Austrian socialists are mad, for they appear to have felt the boot or to be conscious they soon will.

The Heimwehr comes in here again, for the two factions have long been at loggerheads. Prince Starhemberg called the socialists "these bolsheviks" and openly demanded they be thrown out of the Vienna city hall. The party has held political control of the Austrian capital a long time.

The socialists shouted back with a heated warning: "Touch our city hall and you touch off a general strike." The party members were not elated over an order of Karl Vaugoin, demoted from war minister to president of the federal railways, for a cleanup entailing employees' adherence to the Dollfuss "patriotic front" under the pain of losing their jobs.

The socialists also lambasted Dollfuss. Their "six months of patience" with his regime was over, they said, and henceforth they will "fight with the opposition."

A party spokesman went so far as to say that "so great is the indignation of the Vienna populace against the recent measures" difficulty had been experienced in preventing an elemental outburst of popular rage.

Dollfuss had been tolerated, he added, "because he was fighting the nazis, but the actual result of the government's policy has been to strengthen the nazi movement enormously while technically suppressing party mechanism."

Prince Starhemberg came right back with a pledge of allegiance to the Dollfuss front and a promise "to fill it with the Heimwehr spirit." This must have relieved Dollfuss, for the group had held back a "bit at first after the cabinet realignment quipped its previous support."

The prince joined this pledge with another blast at the socialists. "It is unbearable," he shouted at a party meeting, "that the socialists are still in the city hall. The Heimwehr will force its way through, if necessary with relentless brutality."

When the chancellor left for Geneva to attend the League of Nations assembly and the disarmament conference his capital buzzed with rumors of a leading Austro-German breach might be near.

Dollfuss gave the rumor mongers hardly a leg to stand on when he spoke in the assembly four days later of Austria's desire and duty for independence from any outside interference. The German delegates, on the front row, did not join in the applause.

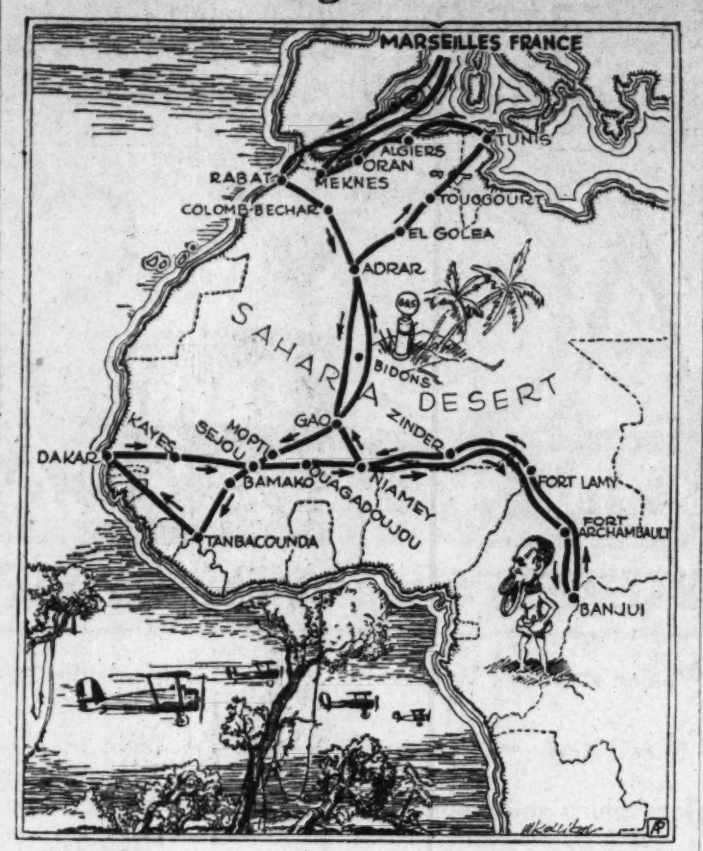

20 Persons Rescued
As Steamer Sinks

LONDON, Sept. 30.—(AP)—A report to Lloyds from the British steamship Andromeda today said the Latvian steamer Andromeda sank after sending an SOS from 48.40 north and 7.3 west. Her crew of 20 was saved, but the first engineer was missing.

The captain of the Andromeda said he thought an explosion or striking an unseen obstruction caused the wreck. The Andromeda and the British vessel Carinthia and the Dutch ship Mitra responded to the distress call. The Andromeda left Barry on September 28 for Algiers.

France To Test Army Planes
In Mass Flight Over Africa

Braving African mountains, desert and jungle, 25 French army planes will start in November on the cross-country journey shown on the map. Military authorities in Paris say the object is to test mass flight tactics and survey air routes.

By RICHARD MASSOCK.

PARIS, Sept. 30.—(AP)—An adventure squadron of 25 French military airplanes will brave sandstorms, tornadoes and the tropical rains of November in a vast and daring survey of France's great African empire.

Led by General Victor Vuillemin, war ace, organizer of French colonial aviation and "Sahara specialist," the aerial explorers will fly over deserts, mountains and jungles.

Disclaim Ballo Rivalry.

Their purpose, officially, is to observe how well organized are the present military air routes, destined eventually to be adapted to commercial flying.

Unofficially, the flight will serve as a demonstration of French army aviation in massed flight, although any comparison with the trip of General Italo Balbo's Italian fleet to Chicago is disclaimed.

Hazards of the desert, include the fact that landing a plane struts up a cloud of dust that obscures the ground for five minutes. After crossing the Sahara the squadron will run into the rainy season in Equatorial Africa.

Outfitted for Jungles.

Reservoirs containing 21 gallons of water will be provided for each plane, which also will carry emergency provisions for a month, as well as hunting outfits, a bag of sand for an anchor and a wireless set.

Letters, reports of Marselles, will be the starting point and the finish. The planes will fly to Rabat, Colomb-Bechar and beyond Algeria and Morocco to Adrar, an outpost in the Sahara.

Bidon 5, lonely gasoline pump that stands a solitary servant to French aviation in the middle of the Sahara, will be the next stop.

Then will come Gao, in French West Africa; Mopti, on the Niger, called the "Venice of Sudan"; Bamako, capital of Sudan; Tanbougou, in the middle of the Senegalese forest, where a landing field has been cut out of the brush, and finally Dakar, on the Senegal coast, where the fleet will rest for several days.

The itinerary next lies by way of Kayes, Senegal; Ouagadougou, capital of Upper Volta; Niamey, on the Niger; Zinder, midway between the Niger and Lake Chad; Fort Lamy, in French Equatorial Africa, and Fort Archambault and Bangui, in Gabon-Chari, where originate the saucier-gui women of the circuses.

The return trip will be made to Niamey over the same route, then the planes will fly via Gao, Bidon 5, Adrar, El Golea, Touggourt, in Algeria; Tunis, Algiers, Oran and Meknes, Morocco.

HEAVY MEAT 'TAX' LEVIED BY SOVIET

Peasants Required To
More During 1934.

MOSCOW, Sept. 30.—(AP)—A 25 per cent increase in the meat "tax," by which the government collects its meat supplies for urban populations and the army, had been levied against the peasantry for 1934.

Under a decree signed by Joseph Stalin, secretary-general of the communist party, and V. Molotov, president of the council of peoples' commissars, the peasants must sell to the government at fixed prices as much meat in 1934 as they are called upon to furnish during the 15-month period of 1933.

Every Peasant Affected.

Every peasant family in the land must contribute its allotted quota, regardless of whether it owns any livestock, or he fined the open market price of the amount it fails to deliver. The open market price is considerably higher than government prices.

These unable to furnish beef, mutton or pork are permitted to turn in poultry, but those who haven't any of these things must buy them in order to meet the "tax."

The tax must be paid "on the hoof," it amounts to 90 to 110 pounds, for the year, depending on the region, for each family of individual peasants, or those who still are hold-outs from the collective armies; 55 to 70 pounds for peasants on collective farms where no livestock is bred and 35 to 45 pounds for families on livestock collectives.

Each breeding farm must contribute 63 pounds for each cow it owns in the country, 205 pounds for each sow and 18 pounds for each ewe.

The "tax" may be paid in four installments, beginning with 40 per cent within the first three months and 10, 20 and 30 per cent in the succeeding quarters.

In publishing the decree the soviet press did not mention the increase in assessments, merely chronicling the actual amounts to be delivered.

At Leipzig in Recess

LEIPZIG, Germany, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Although the trial of five men accused of burning the reichstag building was in recess today, plans of the prosecution went forward on the basis of a confession by one of the defendants that he set the blaze last February.

Mariaux van der Lubbe, 24-year-old Dutch brickman, almost inaudibly replied affirmatively to a judge's question, "Do you admit setting fire yourself to the reichstag?" He added that he used his coat, shirt, towels and draperies to start the fire, taking 15 to 30 minutes in his dash from room to room.

The hearing was adjourned until next Wednesday because of a Nazi lawyers' convention here.

House Is Already Picked
as Recognition Nears.

MOSCOW, Sept. 30.—(UP)—The building which will house the United States embassy in Moscow following the expected recognition of the Soviet union by Washington, has been designated unofficially but unanimously by popular acclaim.

The "American embassy," as it is referred to already, is a palatial private residence on Spassko-Peskovsky street. It is one of the most spacious in Moscow, and has come to be regarded here as the future residence of American ambassadors.

The United States government will of course be free to choose its own quarters on long-term lease from the soviet housing authorities. It may reject the edifice which common report says "awaits" American recognition.

But the choice would be a rather narrow one. The buildings in Moscow suitable for an embassy of such importance are most limited and all but a few already are leased to other governments.

For two and one-half years, up to 1929, one of the small rooms in the big house was occupied by Charles Smith, the Moscow representative of the American-Russian chamber of commerce, and now representing General Motors here.

It was probably this circumstance which first encouraged the assumption in political circles that the house eventually would become the United States embassy.

Originally, it was the private residence of a millionaire merchant named Vtoroff. After the revolution, it was taken over by the soviet government. At present, it is used by the commissariat of foreign affairs for more important social functions.

It is the scene on the evening of every November 7 of an official reception to the diplomatic corps and foreign correspondents at which President Kalinin, war commissar Voroshilov and others high in official circles are present.

Mrs. Eugenia Bankhead
Breaks Engagement

LONDON, Sept. 30.—(AP)—The search of Mrs. Eugenia Bankhead Hoyt, Tallulah Bankhead's sister, for an "ideal husband" has had a temporary setback with the announcement that her engagement to a handsome 28-year-old Englishman was broken.

Thus her seventh venture into matrimony has been postponed. Her engagement to E. Kennedy McConnell, son of a retired coal magnate, was cancelled yesterday for an unannounced reason. The betrothal was announced September 12.

FEAR OF GERMANY
AGAIN GENERATES CONCERN IN PARIS

French Officials Regard
It as Inevitable That Teutons Will Attack
Sometime in Future.

By FRANK HILLIER.

(Copyright, 1933, by the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

PARIS, Sept. 30.—So far as France is concerned the rearming of Germany has reached a point where definite steps must soon be taken to deal with the situation.

There is a realist spirit in French official circles. It is not pretended that Germany is about to attack France, or that she is likely to do so in the immediate future. But that in the long run she will do so unless prevented is regarded as more or less certain. Or else she will do something, probably in central Europe, which will precipitate a conflict.

The basis of French policy at the moment is to effect a rigid control of armaments as a minimum, and as a maximum to take a breach of the peace by Germany impossible by making it clear to Germany that if she provokes a war she is bound to lose it.

Importance.

Thus the resumed meeting of the disarmament conference takes on capital importance. There Germany will be faced by the crucial test of the sincerity of the pacific protestations of Herr Hitler. If he means what he says, assert the French, there is no reason why he should not accept control of armaments or the British draft convention.

That Germany will do both, and make Europe safe from war, is regarded in France as highly improbable, and attention is thus concentrated on the question of what should be done in that eventuality.

What France would like above all things is that Great Britain should make it plain to Germany that it she breaks the peace she will instantly have to deal with the full might of Britain as well as of France, Poland and the Little Entente.

Two years ago, in the rearming of Germany is not stopped, France will before long be compelled to increase her own armaments. Her character in equipment can be distinguished by Germany in two years or less.

In trained man power she has at the moment very little if any superiority over Germany.

This statement will surprise those who have believed France possesses a mighty army.

For every year's conscript service half the men under the colors have, at any given moment, less than six months' service and, being only partly trained, cannot be counted on the firing line. The number of trained men under the colors is now 232,000.

Deducting the 70,000 kept in reserve for possible emergency overseas, comparable to the British troops in India, the number is reduced to 162,000, which is less than the combined strength of the German long-service Reichswehr and the Schupo, the militia ignoring the trained reserves of the former.

The 500,000 Nazi storm troops are probably at least as well trained as the French conscripts, if not the first line troops themselves.

The margin is in fact so small that it seems inevitable, in the event of Germany's rearming, that France will have to resort to a "last resort" war.

That would mean that Europe might again be starting down the same slope that led to the doom of 1914.

Character that the French government deems it prudent not to make the facts public at present.

Canada expects early recovery.

MONTREAL, Sept. 30.—(UP)—Canada stands in favor of the return to the prosperity of former years.

The Dominion has weathered the depression in a gratifying manner. Leaders in all departments of Canada's national life are in agreement with the prime minister, Right Hon. R. B. Bennett, regarding this.

Statements by Bennett, industrialists, railway executives, etc., bearing on the Canadian economic situation, reflect the pronouncement of the prime minister that "the worst is over," that Canada "has survived the crisis," and that while trials remain to be met, "they will be successfully overcome."

Encouraging Factors.

Especially noteworthy and encouraging is the fact that during the last decade there has not been even a run on any Canadian chartered bank, much less a bank failure.

Canadian banks, though adhering to sound principles of banking, undoubtedly have saved the Dominion from serious financial disturbance. Which demonstrates the stability of the branch banking system in times of stress.

Promising features in the present economic outlook include the healthy condition of savings deposits, the strong technical position of Canadian manufacturers, and a prosperous gold mining industry.

Admirable Position.

The most difficult situation in Canada is that of agriculture. A revival of world trade and a return of profits to agriculture must precede any general return of prosperity to the Dominion; but Canada is in an admirable position to participate in the first material advance.

Word from Ottawa says that Canada has an eye on the National Industrial Recovery Act in the United States, and may soon adopt a recovery program of her own to lend impetus to the forward movement. The NRA has been definitely rejected by the prime minister, but this does not eliminate the possibility of the Canadian government inaugurating a policy designed to remedy and stimulate business on this side of the border.

Escoffier, King of Chefs and Chef to Kings,
Abandons Stove to Write His Memoirs

By JOHN KOBLER.

(Copyright, 1933, by the United Press.)

PARIS, Sept. 30.—After 63 years of ardent service the great Escoffier, the king of chefs and the chef of kings, has abandoned the frying pan for the pen to write his memoirs, a relict with the succulent odor of his immortal sauces, melancholy with souvenirs of his glamorous clients.

For nearly three-quarters of a century this amazing personality has roared fragrant chickens and fried kidneys in a sauce of old cognac. So famous was the cuisine of the world-famous "blue-ribbon" that his country honored him with the "red ribbon" of the Legion of Honor.

And what national hero was ever more deserving? In all the corners of the world Escoffier has set a precedent for the pre-eminence of French cooking. He is the unofficial ambassador of French delicacies, the champion of France's glamorous gastronomic tradition—that tradition which is so honor-bound that Le Grand Vatel, chef to Louis XIV, took his own life when a Saint did not turn out to be a perfect specimen of his handiwork.

Five Thousand Chefs!

It was in the school of Escoffier that 5,000 chefs were turned out to carry on the glowing standard of the epicure. With the report that Escoffier now is martalling material for his memoirs, epicures the world over are licking their chops.

The completed book will have a great appeal for the romanticist as well as the student of history. The most illustrious epicures in the world have been served by Escoffier, who was chef to Napoleon III, to General McMahon, and to Edward VII, when that gallant monarch sojourned in France to sow his wild oats. Escoffier even cooked a meal for the former German kaiser.

"It was, I remember, a salmon of the Loire," he said, "braised in butter, and served with a sauce after a dinner aboard a yacht, his congratulations."

"You have regaled me, Maître Escoffier," he said. "How can I thank you?"

"Sire, given us back Alsace-Lorraine."

Professor Says Average
White Man Could Not Live on Islands.

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Sept. 30.—(UP)—Disillusionment awaits the American, who views the South Seas as a place where a pet monkey will bring him a bunch of bananas for lunch.

Dr. Albert W. Herre, Stanford University professor said as he set out on his tenth exploration trip into the islands.

"To the tourist the islands of the east seem full of glamor, romance and beauty," Herre said.

"He longs for the unencumbered luxury of living among simple, harmless natives, gathering rich food only by reaching for it, hearing the song of golden orioles and breathing the perfumes of orchids."

"All these things are true to a limited degree but only for the natives and the tourists who look on from the decks of comfortable liners."

The "average white man," the professor said, could not endure life on "one of these lonely islands."

"He could not overlook the monotonous diet and insufficient water supply, or resist intestinal infections and parasites. He's too accustomed to ice and a varied diet. Herre said.

In 65,000 miles of travel to the far east and the South Seas the Stanford teacher has seen cannibals and headhunters; monkeys that eat crabs; bats that eat coconuts; a village where a well sunk in a graveyard drains drinking water; and harem of chiefs' retainers containing white, brown and yellow women.

He has seen schools of saildines "seven miles long"—the schools not the saildines, he explained—and has counted 3,600,000 ripe eggs ready to spawn by one female bango, a fish 23 inches long.

Cockleburrs and Naturists Edict
Discourage Nudism Among French

PARIS, Sept. 30.—(UP)—The French nudist movement is dying, passing away with a general order forbidding naturists to appear undressed behind the cocklebur bushes of Physiopolis, the island in the Seine river at Villennes which the nudists purchased as their haven.

When the colony increased this summer, necessitating the building of two huge undressing buildings, the naturists with snips of cloth here and there professed to be shocked when they saw nudists with only a blush to hide their confusion.

Nudists were discouraged early this summer when they saw the naturists using bathing suits. Physiopolis is now more dressed up than Deauville, and many of the bathing suits worn along that fashionable resort would be considered downright indecent.

He now is 84, a man of small means, but with a comfortable little villa at Monte Carlo. While he no longer serves as chef, he occasionally makes tours of the great hotels and restaurants in Europe merely to see that the tradition is being respected.

The Week in Review

The Week Ahead.

Geneva.—The oratory over, there looms for the League of Nations the question of Adolf Hitler's anti-Semitic policy. To decide whether the League has jurisdiction under the minorities clause of the covenant?

Repeal.—Virginia votes Tuesday. The score thus far: Republican 51, prohibitionists 9. The League has jurisdiction under the minorities clause of the covenant?

The President.—A further disclosure of his economic policies, presumably to include a discussion on currency, is expected from Mr. Roosevelt, who returns to Washington October 5. He plans close attention to credit expansion.

Athens.—The efforts of America to extradite Samuel Lussli, indicted after the financial collapse of his powerful utility system, will have a hearing Saturday.

War Debts.—Dean Acheson, undersecretary of the treasury, will handle the war debt discussions. The British reportedly seeking a lump payment, will talk first.

New York.—Tuesday, at the Polo Grounds, the Senators and the Giants open the World Series.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Strikes—the workers will go to higher wages, shorter hours, spread of employment—cannooded industry this week.

Tens of thousands of laborers—in steel towns coal camps, automobile factories, silk mills—stopped work, battling for union recognition.

Into the stronghold of steel—citadel of the open shop for years—marched the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers. It is a member of the American Federation of Labor, foe of steel's "company union."

Down the Ohio river—on whose banks stand miles of "big steel," the United States Steel Corporation—floated rumors of labor unrest.

Coal, handmaiden of steel, suffered most.

Upward of 75,000 diggers extended picket lines in Pennsylvania—protesting the failure of the H. C. Frick Company, subsidiary of United States Steel, to sign the coal code of the NRA.

The Ford Motor Company plant at Chester, Pa., closed, in answer to the walkout of 3,000 workers who seek a five-day week, seven-hour day, a minimum daily wage of $5. Desires of forcing the shutdown of all the company's plants in the east, the workers demand a sympathy strike of the assembly works in Edgewater, N. J., where the American Federation of Labor pledged its support.

In Michigan's automobile towns, tool and die workers struck for bargaining rights. Too, the I. W. W.'s Metal and Machinery Workers' Industrial Union in Detroit.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

At Geneva.—The League convened. The world asked: Is it a prelude to disarmament?

The keynote of the assembly, Premier John Mowinkel, of Norway, declared the war clouds hanging over "corn and divided Europe."

Germany wants peace, said the Reich propagandist in chief, Joseph Goebbels. He attended League sessions heavily guarded.

"We assert more 'than ever our freedom and independence,'" said a toughly Chancellor Dollfuss.

The Austrian dictator fights on against the union with the Reich—the aim of the nazis. The powers strove to smooth out the troubles between them and Hitler.

Amid rumors of a lessening of friction between the Reich and France, the French foreign minister, Paul Boncour, said his nation could not support any rearmament of Germany—which Hitler was represented as wanting for the eastern frontiers.

In London, the wheat accord struck a snag. Soviet Russia, allotted an export of 44,000,000 bushels, held out for a quota of 75,000,000 bushels. The United States, with a quota of 47,000,000, and Canada asked the Russians to take an additional 8,000,000 and be satisfied.

"Why should we?" asked the Moscow delegate. He walked out.

The negotiations for an accord, for the nonce, are at a standstill.

AMERICAN RECOVERY.

Studying credit expansion, President Roosevelt went to Hyde Park on the Hudson. To aid steel, he explored the possibility of large loans for railroad equipment.

He left behind in Washington a hushed camp of inflationists.

Commodity rises by easing credit, apparently, was the administration program of the moment.

The American Federation of Labor credited the NRA with an employment increase of 815,000 persons in the month between July 15 and August 15.

But, said William Green, the federation's president, there are still 11,000,000 jobless.

CRIME AND DISORDER.

The drive against crime—into which the federal government has thrown its full force—brought the capture in Memphis of "Machine Gun" George Kelly, desperado.

Kelly and his wife—who says she never saw a machine gun—were extradited to Oklahoma City to stand trial as an abductor of Charles Urschel, oil operator. Of the $200,000 Urschel ransom money, federal oper-

MOSCOW, Sept. 30.—(UP)—A soviet stratosphere balloon ascended more than 11 miles into the upper atmosphere on a quest for scientific data today, reaching a height never before attained by man.

Three soviet scientists manned the balloon, and when it descended to night they announced they had risen more than 19,000 meters, which is 62,320 feet, or 11 3-4 miles. Their instruments are yet to be officially calibrated.

The previous record, set by Professor Auguste Piccard and Max Cosyns, was 53,153 feet, made over the Alps.

Safe and warm in their hermetically sealed gondola, the men recorded a temperature outside of 88.6 degrees below zero, while the heat inside went to 86 degrees above zero, due to the sun beating down on their globe-shaped cage.

Not content with their amazing feat, the Russians announced that another attempt will be made tomorrow or as soon afterward as possible, in an even larger balloon, the Osoaviakhim, which will try to exceed today's record by the USSR.

The USSR was manned by Professor George Prokofiev, pilot; Ernest Birnbaum, engineer, and C. D. Gouzenov, observer. The balloon, after a 10-hour flight, landed shortly after 5 p. m. near Kolomoia, in a green field close to the bank of the Moscow river, opposite the city.

The United Press correspondent, after a dash by taxicab through the city and a trip by barge across the river, arrived when the balloon landed.

The fliers said they were tired, but in excellent physical condition. They did not suffer at any time in their eight hours in the air, although they found the heat in the sealed cabin uncomfortable.

"We could see the earth below like a great detailed relief map," Birnbaum said. "The clouds appeared like mere tufts of cotton. We were too busy to pay much attention to the scenery, however. We made hundreds of scientific observations, some of which we hope will prove of value to aviation."

Prokofiev said meteorological conditions were perfect.

Part of the idea back of the flight was to gather data which would establish the feasibility of flying in the rarified upper atmosphere across oceans and continents in tremendous speed, encircling the globe in hours instead of days.

When the crew emerged they became as cold as ice. Prokofiev, mounted the side of the balloon and made a speech, enthusiastically describing the flight a brilliant victory for the soviet. He said the flight was a triumph for the soviet, a triumph for the soviet, a triumph for the soviet.

Local communists also made speeches and extended warm greetings to the fliers.

Revolvers were smuggled inside the Iranian penal colony at Michan Gany. Armed with them, 10 convicts, all long-termers, broke loose, kidnapping a sheriff as hostage and escaped.

Rebellion raged Tuesday night in a Philadelphia prison. Some 1,700 convicts rioted, pillaged the place. They were in the city hall. The warden

PATIENCE SOUGHT IN LABOR CIRCLES

Green Asks Dissatisfied Workers To Arbitrate Before Striking.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—(AP)—In an appeal to restless members of the American Federation of Labor for patience until the recovery program develops fully, President William Green, of the federation, asked today that dissatisfied workers try to arbitrate before striking.

His statement was taken by some officials of the organization as a key-note for the convention that opens next week. In the declaration issued while thousands of workers through the country were on strike, Green held that the "right to strike is fundamental."

However, he added: "I urge all workers who have grievances to make use of the instruments of law available before resorting to the extreme action of striking. If there is a failure to secure redress through these agencies, the right to strike certainly remains open as an instrument of last resort."

"It may not be amiss also to counsel unorganized workers to use calm judgment and great caution in resorting to strikes without organization and without discipline."

Discipline stressed. "Employers are being disciplined and are learning lessons in these new times. Let the workers gain discipline early and learn their lessons well."

"The procedure I urge is thoroughly in keeping with the new deal, which is creating new methods and new instrumentalities for the settling of industrial disputes. It is, I think, the duty of wage earners to give it a fair trial and it is certainly a matter of wisdom to make use of this machinery until it is proven that it can not be helped."

Some of the 300 convention delegates already in town expressed belief, however, that their president was asking for too much patience.

"Every one of those connected with the recovery act should get credit for what has been done," Green said. "Much is yet to be accomplished, but an examination of facts and our own figures—on which we can depend—shows that since June almost 3,000,000 have been given employment."

Getting Action. "That is not, admittedly, as many new jobs as should have been made available through application of the codes."

"Green though we may be disappointed, we are having at least one thing and that is action. I had rather see action with mistakes than just sit and wait."

Besides the dispute over NRA, Green will have another problem to solve. The metal trades department of the federation has protested, officially, the way the A. F. of L. is organizing new members into federal industry unions directly affiliated with the federation instead of having them join existing trade unions.

Green replied that speed was essential and other problems could be settled later. He said 1,500,000 new members joined A. F. of L. unions in June, July and August, and that organization of workers into unions representing crafts alone instead of whole industries would have slowed the work.

Another Convention. At the same time that the general federation begins its convention on Monday, a group of its members forming the trade union committee for unemployment insurance will meet in another convention hall to work for:

Withdrawal of A. F. of L. officials from NRA position.

Immediate endorsement of unemployment insurance and efforts to have it written into all codes.

Reduction of the salaries of international union officers.

Recognition of the right to strike. A ban against compulsory arbitration.

Louis Weinstock, a member of this group, said it would seek admission to the federal council next Tuesday, but added that "we might be thrown out by force as we were at Cincinnati last year."

Hides for 9 Years From Murder Charge

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 30.—(UP)—A dark and dusty attic in his mother's home secretly harbored Charles E. Youngblood from justice for nine years, during which time he kept close relatives thought he was dead.

Youngblood, charged with the murder of his wife, Estelle, nine years ago last February, was placed under arrest here this afternoon after someone recognized him yesterday as he was taking a short walk near his home.

Wild-eyed and unkempt after the close confinement, the man confessed to District Attorney Richard M. Atkinson. He said he shot and killed his wife from ambush as she alighted from a street car near their home.

Law enforcement officers and acquaintances had given him up as being dead because he was reported to have fallen into the Cumberland river the day after the shooting of his wife.

The story of how Youngblood was able to maintain his secrecy was left unexplained as relatives refused to comment.

Six men were arrested.

New York Girds for Start Of Bitter Political Fight

Opposition To Tammany Leadership Apparently Stronger Than Any Time in Score of Years.

By JOHN R. BEAL.
NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(UP)—New York city girded itself tonight for the grand opening of a sensational and bitter political campaign, with opposition to Tammany leadership—both within and without the famous hall—apparently stronger than at any time in a score of years.

From the Battery to the Bronx, along bustling Broadway and to the far reaches of Brooklyn suburbs, interest in the three-cornered battle for control of America's largest city government already is overshadowing every other topic of conversation at the dinner table, in speakeasies and on commuters' trains.

Most frequently the question asked is: "Can they beat Tammany?"

The independent democratic candidacy of Joseph V. McKee, former aldermanic president, offered to Tammany leaders, who are dissatisfied with Mayor John P. O'Brien, the opportunity to support a democrat without being so irregular as to support Fiorello H. LaGuardia, fusion candidate, whose most conspicuous public service has been under the republican banner.

Within 24 hours after McKee tossed his hat in the ring seven Tammany district leaders were understood to have given him tacit support.

Included were three who had won in the primaries on opposition to John F. Curry, leader of the Hall. While all or most of the rebellious leaders probably will give lip service to O'Brien, they are expected to give active, sub-rosa support to McKee.

In one district, the Tammany leader told the United Press "off the record" that his followers were asking him whom to support.

"But if I tell them O'Brien they won't vote for him," he said, "so I'll have to pick either McKee or LaGuardia."

McKee, having decided to run after a period of indecision, studied the problem of selecting candidates to round out his ticket. Malvina Peritz, regular democratic nominee for president of the board of aldermen, and James J. Lyons, regular candidate for Bronx borough president, were expected to receive places on the McKee ticket. Both are Bronx men selected by Edward J. Flynn, who is McKee's sponsor and who is closely allied with the democratic national administration through Postmaster-General James A. Farley.

Fusion leaders, who had made strenuous efforts to prevent McKee from entering the race, fearing his candidacy might split the anti-Tammany vote, went ahead with plans for an aggressive campaign directed both at Tammany and McKee.

At the moment, LaGuardia has the strongest support from the press, with endorsement of the New York Herald Tribune, the New York Times, the World-Telegram and the Bronx Home News. The Sun leaned toward McKee. Others were noncommittal.

It appeared that Alfred E. Smith would have little or no part in the campaign. Tammany selected its slate without consulting him, and he was reported loath to campaign for O'Brien.

Public Ownership
Of Utilities Urged

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—(UP)—There is no reason why public ownership of utilities cannot be on a higher level of service than private administration, Arthur E. Morgan, TVA chairman, said in an address here tonight to the Public Ownership Institute.

Public ownership may call for finer motives than are usual in private administration and give the people a keener interest in government by touching their every-day lives, he said.

"The only threat to the success of the public ownership movement," he said, "was the custom of political patronage." Rarely, he said, is a political appointee best fitted for the job to be filled.

To divorce public ownership of utilities from politics, Mr. Morgan suggested the organization of an institute of public managers. This institute would establish professional standards, standards of administrative practices, offer a central service of legal and technical counsel to cities, and provide a source of supply of qualified executives for cities and states to draw upon.

Bank in Minnesota
Is Robbed of $1,600

PIPESTONE, Minn., Sept. 30.—(AP) Subduing the town's only policeman, five bandits looted the Pipestone National bank of $1,600 today and then used three women employees as shields in fleeing in a large car bearing Nebraska license plates.

Authorities theorized the raiders might have been escaped prisoners from Michigan City, Ind., since some of the fleeing convicts were believed in Nebraska two days ago and Iowa yesterday.

The bandits forced the three girls, the cashier and the president to lie on the floor. Finding the time lock barring the way to the interior of the vault, they took $1,600 from the cash drawers and then forced the girls to walk with them out of the bank.

Even while the campaign is under way a commission of fifteen leading citizens is studying liquor control, under legislative direction to submit a plan to the 1934 session for adoption in the event the state votes for a control system.

WOMEN WILL RULE
WORLD IN FUTURE,
SAYS DR. WILLEMS

Women are the future masters of the world and it is up to them to save the culture of the world, Dr. Edouard Willems, president of the University of Brussels, said Saturday following a talk to the members of the student body of Agnes Scott College.

"The women of the world have to save the culture here in the United States and in Europe," he said. "The deeper meaning of colleges for the women of today is to give them the elegant knowledge of art, music and books which men lose when they lose their leisure time. Business interests make them drop all that makes culture in the home. The greatest menace of the world today is that it is becoming like a factory, but with the help of the women of today it can become homelike again."

LEGIONNAIRES ASK STRONG DEFENSE

Vanguard of American Legion Convenes for Heated Session.

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—(AP)—The American Legion, a quarter million strong, occupied Chicago tonight with loud demands for strengthening national defense against possible foreign invasion and for adequate compensation for veterans.

From Louis A. Johnson, their national commander, the Legionnaires received a declaration that the national economy act of last March had "struck directly at the very foundation of the defense of this nation."

He made the charge in his report as commander to the 15th annual Legion convention.

"Reasonable economies in the army and navy can be effected without injury to our national defense," Johnson said, "but the country was not prepared to accept the drastic cuts proposed."

Johnson went on to say that prompt action by the American Legion had succeeded in "saving the civilian components of our defense system—the national guard, the reserve officers' training camps, and the citizens' military training camps."

Although convention committees poured over nearly 1,000 resolutions embracing suggestions for national legislation from the 48 states, the principal business on the program until Monday was merriment.

Pre-convention jollity, withal, was orderly. Five hundred police officers, all of them legionnaires, had few duties in maintaining order.

Nor was there any indication of heated arguments on the convention floor though resolutions calling for revoking the charter of the John McShane post of Chicago because of alleged non-co-operation with the organization as a whole had been drafted. There were others asking removal of General Frank T. Hines as head of the veterans' bureau at Washington.

Arrival of new state delegations almost hourly and conferences between them and national officials caused reports to arise that demands for immediate payment of the bonus would receive only cursory consideration by the convention.

It appeared probable that acceptance of the Legion's four-point program for veterans' relief would be nearly unanimous.

Preparations were made on the basis that President Roosevelt would address the Legion in its inaugural session in the Chicago stadium on Monday.

NEGRO EDUCATOR INVITED TO ADDRESS CONVENTION
WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Dr. Emmett J. Scott, secretary of Howard University, a school for negroes, said today he had been invited to address the American Legion convention at Chicago next week.

This, he added, will be the first speech "delivered by a colored citizen from the platform of an American Legion convention in behalf of colored veterans."

The invitation, Scott said, was received from Louis Johnson, national commander of the Legion. Scott was a special assistant to the secretary of war during the World War.

A temperature range of 66 to 86, with the possibility of showers this afternoon, was forecast for today by the weather bureau.

Today's temperature will be slightly lower than Saturday's, which ranged between 68 and 90. There was no rain Saturday. There was a possibility that the weather might be cooler Monday.

It takes seven cars to make a Ford

Dearborn, Mich.

Outside those features which are exclusive in the FORD V-8, many of our advanced improvements can be found in other cars—PROVIDED—you get six or seven of the best cars in America together and combine their particular good points.

But the only car in which you can find ALL these advanced improvements is the Ford V-8.

To illustrate: Begin with the V-type 8-cylinder engine. You can get an ordinary 8-cylinder engine in any of a dozen makes of cars. But if you want the V-type engine of 8 cylinders or more, several other makes of cars will give it to you, if you pay the price of these cars which runs from $2,245 to $5,000.

Take the extra strong X-type frame. You can get this in some other more expensive makes of cars as well as in the Ford. But we do not know of any car except the Ford, in which the X-members continue the full length of the frame, making 4 full length side members instead of two.

Several makes of cars will give you the ½ floating rear axle if you pay from $1,310 to $6,250. One maker of cars puts this axle in the high-priced cars, but not in the low-priced one. It is standard on the Ford.

You can get the torque tube drive in six other makes of cars, only one of which costs less than $1,000. It has always been a part of the Ford.

There is only one other car—according to S. A. E. rating—that has more horsepower per pound of car weight than the Ford V-8 has, and that is a famous car which sells for $4,825.

Take the Ford V-8 aluminum cylinder head, which adds 10 horsepower to the engine without using more gas—in fact, using less gas; — it is standard in only two cars today, beside the Ford. One of these cars sells just under $800 and the other at $4,825.

The radiator capacity of the Ford V-8 is larger than that of any car of 30 horsepower or under, except one make of car, and that car sells at $1,895.

Its crank case oil reservoir capacity is less than that of any other 8-cylinder car. Five quarts. That speaks volumes as to oil economy.

And so we could go on with specifications, showing that every Ford car combines the advanced improvements which are scattered here and there amongst a number of other excellent makes. And, of course, there are special points of quality that are exclusively Ford features.

In the list of light 8's, the Ford is lowest priced. Of the V-8's, the Ford costs less than one-fourth the price of the next car on the list.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

CONGO SOLO.

Misadventures Two Degrees North. A story by Emily Hahn, a graduate engineer, who believes that a young woman can go anywhere in the world alone without molestation if she conducts herself properly. She has just returned from a long stay in the Congo country—the wildest part of Africa—and now is preparing to go to the wilds of Indo-China.

A few years ago the young author wrote a startling story and then disappeared. The story is her friends advised her to go to Africa—this she did. Upon her return she was accompanied by a monkey and, the most important of all, a trunk full of notes out of which she wove the interesting story of "Congo Solo." It is true there have been many books written on Africa by different writers and tourists, but has been left to Miss Hahn to tell in her exciting and interesting style the story of Africa, how she went to Africa, how she met the African race of people in whom she was even before this very much interested. She went out there, lived among them, studied their lives and ways, and then returned to a greater degree than any other writer.

Outside of the interest and the success she met in the Congo, she was the assistance she was able to give a friend who was in charge of a medical post in the jungle—a busy place where people are always fighting infectious diseases. For the work she accomplished here she is called one of the world's heroines for it was not only unpleasant work, but among the pygmies, but it was dangerous. Among the list of noted and successful travelers the name of Emily Hahn should not be overlooked. It is an interesting story of Africa. (Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis.)

NEW FICTION.

"Oil for the Lamps of China." By Alice Tisdale Hobart. Author of "The City of the Long Sand" and "Within the Walls of Nanking." The scene is laid in China—slowly but surely it unfolds the story of China, fire, flood, famine and plague. It is unforgettable. (The Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis.)

"The Apple and Eve." By Jo Van Amers-Keiser. The author has written a number of books which have become popular fiction. The setting is partly Dutch and partly Parisian, and the story is woven around two people—a subject that never grows old. The famous Dutch writer contributes a most readable book for the fall season. (Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.)

"The Diary of a Plain Dirt Gardener." By Harry R. O'Brien. While this is not exactly a fiction, the reader may be somewhat surprised to see it under this head. For Mr. O'Brien has written every month for years in "Better Homes and Gardens" about the plain dirt gardener. The story is true. It is the spring is over and it is not planting time, but in reading this diary which is equal to a romance, it becomes contagious and a garden will certainly be planned by the reader, whether in the back yard or adjoining the lawn. It is true that there will be a garden somewhere after the reading of this story which is original and clever from first page to the last. You, of course, know Harry O'Brien! (Sears Publishing Co., New York.)

"Summer People." By Fanny Heaslip Lea. Author of "Goodbye Summer." Against the windswept background of the rocky Maine coast, reflecting its moods of storm and sunlight, its high-dashing waves and brooding twilight, is drawn this dramatic story of "summer people." The story is woven around people—perhaps you will recognize the characters as being among your circle of friends, for it carries a strong thread of mystery. Because it is a good mystery, though an unusual narrative, it will hold the attention of the reader. (Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.)

"The Master of Jaina." By Mazo de la Roche, author of "Jaina" and "Whiteheads of Jaina." Another interesting story for "Time never stands still at Jaina." (Little Brown & Co.)

"The Immortal Sinner." By Mabel Wagnalls. Author of "Misere," "The Rose Bush of a Thousand Years," etc. When you grow tired of the old fiction, and the modern fiction, read this dual story—one half of which deals with dramatic fate of a very human sinner in Palestine at the time of Christ, and the other half with that of an equally human offender in present-day France. "What can there be about two lives which could span 19 centuries and yet be linked together in a way that makes them one?"

Miss Wagnalls will not be forgotten soon as the author of "The Rose Bush of a Thousand Years" from which the motion picture "Revelation" was made starring Nazimova. (Funk and Wagnalls Co., New York.)

"Murder in the Bath." By Roger Didot. Translated by Elizabeth Abbott. This mystery story has its setting in the American Palace hotel in Paris. When it was announced that to Apartment 107, a wealthy American who was there alone was found dead, with all the windows and doors locked on the inside, the police inspector realized that he had a mystery-puzzle to unravel. The solution is interesting. (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

"The Broken O." By Carolyn Wells. When Fleming Stone feels that he too, has a puzzle-problem it is understood that a deadly agent is the criminal and that a thrilling story is the result. (Lippincott's.)

"THE BEST PLAYS—1932-1933." The Year Book of the Drama in America. Edited by Edwin Mantle. Mr. Mantle annually selects the 10 most representative plays of the year which he includes in his anthology "by a clever combination and excerpts and connecting summaries." He therefore contributes to American literature a delightful and entertaining volume.

The 10 most representative plays are not only included but the volume contains the full casts for each production of the year, the number of performances, etc., the complete facts of the Little Theater Tournment, the list of the plays that have run over 500 performances on Broadway—the birthplaces of prominent actors, also the names of those who have "gone on" during the year.

The introduction tells its own story and is filled also with comments on the different plays, the authors, and it announces that Maxwell Anderson's "Both Your Houses" won the Pulitzer prize, a political background. This is a volume that readers look forward to annually with a great deal of pleasure and it should be a "library book in the end." (Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.)

"MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS." How to Stay Young. By Dr. Robert Hugh Ross, former instructor, Post Graduate Medical school, New York, and author of "Eat Your Way to Health."

The author is most convincing in his teachings and in the manner in which he handles health problems. He is a physician of long experience in

W. R. BURNETT.

W. R. Burnett and his $5,000 racing greyhound, War Cry, who sat for the portrait of "Dark Hazard" in Mr. Burnett's book of that name, "Dark Hazard" is the September selection of the month. This is Mr. Burnett's third selection. "Little Caesar" was a book of the month choice and "Iron Man" a Literary Guild selection.

diet and weight control. Dr. Ross gives definite instructions even including specific menus, and there is also an absence of the many "don'ts" you find in all health books. There is one subject of special interest to women, "Eat for Beauty." It is interesting and is written so that it can be easily digested. It is of special interest to everybody—especially in these days of overwork, worry and distress. It is a book that should be in every home. (Funk & Wagnalls Co., New York.)

"Towards Technocracy." By Graham A. Laing. Introduction by Charles A. Beard. While technocracy is a new word and tells of a new order of things, the author has written his views in such a clear concise style that the reader will understand what it means and what it does not mean. "By a logical process devoid of hysteria or sophistry, the author proves conclusively that we are already entering a new age."—Illustrated Daily News. The author is connected with the California Institute of Technocracy. (Angelus Press, California.)

N. R. A. A Handbook of N. R. A. Laws, Regulations, Interpretations, Codes (125 Industries). Complete and unabridged with supplement service to December 31, 1933.

The foreword, which is written by the publishers, will be of assistance in wading through more than 400 pages of data based on the biggest thing that was ever put into a mimeograph and circulated throughout the country. The work which is issued from the White House and its various departments is material that may be of interest to all men, to a few men, and some is simply official. Men in general do not need it, but the executives to whom it is so valuable will have to study this information for the benefit not only derived for themselves, but for the great number who represent their company, firm, etc. The following is explanatory:

"This handbook meets the need that is necessary. It contains every word of statute, presidential message or formal statement and every official explanation or interpretation that has been issued to date, together with much quasi-official matter deemed of value. In addition it contains in full every approved or partially approved code of fair competition, 18 in number, the so-called blanket code (properly termed the president's re-employment agreement), and the certain substitutions for certain provisions of the blanket code approved for some 125 industries."

There are also editorial explanations which will greatly help in the study of this valuable volume. On October 16, the publishers of N. R. A. will issue the N. R. A. Reporter, in which will be included all official matter that is deemed valuable.

The table of contents, with its several subheads, and with its subjects arranged alphabetically, presents the work that is being done at Washington and which is placing "Uncle Sam" in personal contact with the whole country."

ROLLINS COLLEGE.

President Hamilton Holt, of Rollins College, has announced that Edwin Granberry, the novelist, and Richard Burton, the poet, essayist and critic, had been appointed to the faculty of the department of English and literature for this year.

Granberry, who won the last O. Henry memorial prize for the best short story published in any American magazine for his "A Trip to Cardia," a story with a primitive Florida setting, is the author of three novels, "The Ancient Hunger," "Strangers and Lovers," and "The Red King," the latter two of which have Florida backgrounds. He attended the University of Florida and graduated from Columbia University. For a time he taught romance languages at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, and for two years he was a member of Professor George Pierce Baker's "47 Workshop" at Harvard.

Dr. Burton, who has had a notable career as poet, critic, educator and lecturer, is a graduate of Trinity College and Johns Hopkins. He was twice head of the department of English at the University of Minnesota, serving from 1908 to 1912 and from 1916 to 1925, and was formerly managing editor of the Christian, literary editor of the Hartford Courant, and associate editor of the Warner's Library of the World's Best Literature. He is a former president of the Drama League of America and the New York Drama League, and was chairman of the Pulitzer committee on fiction from 1924 to 1929.

LITERARY DRIFTWOOD.

The new novel in the Jaina saga, "The Master of Jaina," by Mazo de la Roche, was published this month. It is, as the title indicates, the book of Reunty, the virile, taciturn, red-headed chief of the quarrelsome but always loyal clan of Whiteheads. Whether or not one has read the three previous novels in the saga, "The Master of Jaina" may be read with complete enjoyment of its robust story.

A number of literary critics have shown their agreement with Dr. William Lyon Phelps' opinion that A. S. M. Hutchinson's "The Soft Spot" is his best novel since his famous best seller, "If Winter Comes."

Younghill Kang, whose story of his boyhood in Korea, "The Happy Grove," published by Scribners on September 8, has sailed for Europe. Mr. Kang, who was recently awarded a Guggenheim fellowship, will spend a year on the continent in study and creative writing.

The Boston Authors' Club has elected as its new president Russell Gordon Carter. Mr. Carter is the author of a number of books for boys, being best known, perhaps, for "The Three Points of Honor," with which he won a $4,000 prize for the best story dealing with the Boy Scout oath. It was published by Little, Brown & Company, whose latest book of his was "Good Luck, Lieutenant!"

Nation's Freight Bill To Be Cut $100,000,000 as Surcharges End

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—(AP)—The nation's freight bill automatically receives a reduction of almost $100,000,000 a year at midnight tonight.

At that hour the surcharges on freight bills, which the carriers were allowed to put into effect 21 months ago will be dropped and the normal charges for hauling most of the nation's products, especially heavier items like coal and goods other than farm products, will be lowered by from 6 cents a ton to 2 cents per 100 pounds.

The surcharges, promulgated as an emergency move to develop enough income to tide weaker roads over the 1932 financial stringency, failed of their objective, although producing around $70,000,000 a year. It was estimated when they were authorized that they would produce $110,000,000.

The surcharges became effective January 4, 1932, but the railroad's business continued to decline sharply. The situation grew so desperate that a large group of railroads borrowed nearly $300,000,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to meet their financial obligations. In addition, all of the income of the Railroad Credit Corporation, which operated for a year on the funds derived from the surcharges, was loaned to these carriers, about $65,000,000.

The interstate commerce commission, after reviewing the situation last March, authorized the carriers to continue the surcharges until September 30, but said it would not grant further extension and the railroads agreed. For six months each road has retained the surcharges and no one knows the exact total collected.

Since last spring railroad carloadings have shown a steady upward trend, with some weeks showing substantial increases in some items as compared with 1932. The loadings during the third quarter of 1933, although not completed, are believed in railroad circles to have exceeded those of 1932, with increases indicated for the remainder of the year.

The largest railroad tonnage affected by revocation of the surcharges is coal. About one-third of all the freight hauled by the railroads. The surcharges on coal amounted to 6 cents per ton.

Hoover Urges Support Of Recovery Program

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 30.—(AP)—After an informal conference with republican leaders between trains here today, former President Hoover was quoted by one of the group as urging support for President Roosevelt's NRA program.

"We must help the administration put it over if it's humanly possible," Gould Dixie, of Omaha, quoted the former president as advising the group.

The former president and Mrs. Hoover enjoyed an early breakfast here during a three-hour stop between trains. They are homeward bound to California after a visit to Chicago's world fair and a dip into Missouri. A half dozen republican stalwarts, including Robert Smith, chairman of the state central committee, met them and participated in the breakfast conference.

GAGER AND DRAYER TO HAVE FAIR BOOTH

E. G. Gager and R. K. Drayer, who will open as Gager & Drayer, at 309 Peachtree street, will have a booth in the Liberal Arts building at the Southeastern Fair.

King Korn corn chips, which are made by a patented process by which the outer shell of the corn is removed, rolled into a flake and then cooked in a special oil. This product is very appealing to the taste and will be on sale at all soda fountains and grocery stores.

Mr. Gager was formerly of Pittsburgh, Pa., where he has engaged in the automobile business for a number of years. Mr. Drayer was formerly with Lane Drug Stores, Inc., in this city.

PERFECTION STOVE CO.
WILL SHOW AT FAIR

A most attractive line of up-to-date oil ranges and stoves, together with the 1934 models of various other oil-burning devices for the home, are being exhibited at the Southeastern Fair by the Perfection Stove Co., Cleveland, under the direction of Manager W. E. Bereford, of the company's Atlanta office.

Special emphasis is being given in this exhibit to Perfection high-power ranges, which are equipped with high-power burners of an even more efficient design than those of the best Perfections in previous years. Actual demonstrations are scheduled to show how these high-power burners start to cook the minute they are lighted. Their unprecedented efficiency not only saves the user much valuable time in the preparation of meals, but also saves fuel, keeping the kerosene bills down to a minimum.

In this line of Perfection high-power stoves is a wide selection of models. The ranges have built-in ovens, and the stoves are supplied with separate ovens as desired. The finishes are porcelain enamel, baked enamel, and lacquer in various combinations of ivory, black and pastel green.

Another interesting part of this exhibit introduces to Atlanta the Perfection heat-or-cook stove, which not only cooks the meals, but also heats the kitchen when desired, and supplies ample hot water for dish-washing, shaving and miscellaneous household duties. These Perfections are the first oil stoves to be offered for such triple service.

FINE ARTS FEATURE EXHIBITS AT FAIR

Southeastern Fair visitors this year will have opportunities for the first time in fair history of seeing some fine displays of the fine arts furnished to the fair association through the courtesy of the High Museum of Art in Atlanta.

Some of the best paintings at the High Museum will be displayed temporarily at the fair. Among these will be a large life-sized portrait of the great golf champion "Bobby" Jones.

Other oil paintings will include pastoral scenes by some of the greatest contemporary artists as well as some paintings by distinguished Georgia artists.

There will be sections also devoted to displays of the best works in pastels, water colors and etchings. A section also will be devoted to attractive posters.

One of the interesting features of the art display will be the work of a group of art students. They will pursue their regular courses at the exhibit in full view of the crowds. They will have models, both alive and inanimate.

Some fine examples of sculpture will be on display, these being contributed by the art departments of various Georgia educational institutions.

For the variety of art offered and for the beauty of the displays the fine arts exhibit will exceed anything ever offered before in Atlanta outside of the High Museum itself.

A woman has lived in the same house in Stirlingshire, Scotland, for 63 years.

Prize Guernsey Sire Exhibited at the Fair

Miss Lundye Sharpe is seen riding Gayoso Molly's Actor, one of the outstanding prized Guernsey sires entered in the Southeastern Fair's live stock show by Mrs. Ewell Gay, of the Gaymont Dairy. Actor is a $25,000 animal and has never been defeated. He is a blue-ribboned beast.

Helping Arrange Exhibit

Miss Irene Burdett is shown with Mike Benton, president of the Southeastern Fair Association, as they help arrange the exhibit of the Fulton County Boys' 4-H Club.

Southeastern Fair Midway To Show Many Attractions

Visitors to the big automobile show at the Southeastern Fair will have many other interesting features to see during fair week, among these the novel attractions for the midway.

This year these attractions will be furnished by the Royal American Shows, one of the biggest attractions of its kind in the world.

In the list of paid shows are 22 novelties, some of them brought to Atlanta for the first time. Among the rides is a gigantic Ferris wheel with a capacity of 100 passengers. This is the first four-in-one ferris wheel ever brought to Atlanta.

The free attractions to be offered in front of the grandstand are unusually good this year. One of them is the spectacular "Globe of Death," in which motorcycle riders appear in amazing feats in full view of the crowds.

Tuesday and Wednesday will bring the horse show, a pretty social feature, with mounts from many of the greatest stables in the south and from Forts Benning and McPherson.

After the people have visited the General Motors automobile show they will find many other attractions at the fair to entertain them.

COTTON MEN ASKED TO AID RETAILERS

A call has been issued to cotton goods manufacturers to co-operate with retailers in supplying information necessary for them to make out processing tax returns on goods on their shelves when the federal tax became effective, W. E. Page, collector of internal revenue, announced Friday.

Gen. T. Helvering, commissioner of internal revenue at Washington, issued the call. The manufacturers must pay the tax on goods leaving their warehouses after the tax became effective, but retailers must assess the tax against goods held in stock. As the tax is on a pound basis and the retailer has no way of knowing how much cotton there is by weight in his stock, the manufacturer must furnish the information.

Quality Service Stores Plan Exhibit at Southeastern Fair

The Quality Service Stores, co-operating individual grocers, will have a model store on exhibit at the Southeastern Fair. The exhibit will be shown in the Liberal Arts building.

A large number of manufacturers whose goods are sold by these stores are co-operating and will demonstrate their products throughout the week.

Those who will make demonstrations are the Red Band Milling Company, the White Provision Company, A. & M. Butter Company, Savannah Sugar Refining Company and Hirsch Brothers.

Those who will have displays are Rumford Baking Company, Tetley Tea Company, Stokely Brothers, Procter & Gamble, Phillips Packing Company, Fine Products Corporation, Sturdivant Packing Company, Best Foods, Inc., Loose-Wiles Biscuit Company.

The refrigeration equipment will be supplied by the Warren Company. The lighting equipment will come from the General Electric Supply Corporation and the Westinghouse Electric Supply Company and will be installed by the Corley Electric Company and the designed by the lighting service department of the Georgia Power Company. Cash registers will be supplied by the National Cash Register Company and the scales by the Toledo Scales Company. The Hobart Manufacturing Company will supply the slicing machine, coffee mill and food chopper and the glass for the store will be given by the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company.

Lighting a Feature.

The model store which the Quality Service Stores are installing at the Southeastern Fair will be equipped with model store lighting fixtures.

Many merchants are only now beginning to realize that good lighting is one of their most important aids to good business. It was to demonstrate proper store illumination that the Georgia Power Company, in co-operation with the Quality Service Stores, designed the illumination and supervised the installation of the lighting fixtures.

The window reflectors were supplied by the Westinghouse Electric Supply Company and the interior lighting fixtures by the General Electric Supply Company. The installation tion work was done by the Corley Electric Company, contractors, while the engineering and supervisory service was provided by the Georgia Power Company's lighting service department.

The interior of the model store is illuminated by six ceiling fixtures of the semi-indirect type, most of the illumination being reflected from the ceiling, but a portion of the light being diffused through the translucent glass bowls of the fixtures.

The result is an adequate and absolutely uniform intensity of light throughout the store. There are no shadows and there is no glare from the lights. The customer can see the entire stock of merchandise without effort and without strain.

Eighteen show-window reflectors have been installed. These units illuminate the windows with an intensity sufficient to attract the attention of the passer-by and cause him to stop and examine the merchandise on display there.

History of Stores.

Quality Service Stores originated in Lynchburg, Va., a little over 10 years ago and has grown to a membership of more than 2,500 individually owned retail grocery stores operating in 10 southern states. Quality Service Stores is now the largest retailer owned co-operative grocery group in the United States.

The Atlanta unit was organized in August, 1930, and began operating in November, 1930, and now has more than 200 stores in Greater Atlanta, all individually owned and operated. Some of the Quality Service Stores have been operating in Atlanta more than 40 years and through unit and effort have made rapid progress.

In September, 1931, arrangements were made to merge with the Atlanta Saving Stores, which is a buying organization, and afforded the Quality Service Stores the facilities of a warehouse.

At present Quality Service Stores is considered one of the most powerful grocery organizations in the south, with the ability to meet keenest competition, but in meeting this competition has not sacrificed quality in any respect.

Following are the officers: M. Blank, president; J. H. Croley, vice president; Buying department, Louis Vrono, treasurer; Jack Maziar, secretary.

Directors: N. Maziar, L. Kunian, A. C. Goodyear, D. Merlin, M. Merlin, A. S. Murrain, B. A. Hasty, A. Farkas, A. S. Bernath, E. Greenbaum, Erwin Brown, Harry Lehman, M. Weinberg, M. Newman, I. Reynolds.

COURT OF APPEALS WILL OPEN MONDAY

The fifth judicial circuit court of appeals will open in the federal building Monday and remain in session two weeks. The October term of the district court will also open, taking up the criminal docket, and a new grand jury will be organized.

About 100 appeal cases will be considered by the circuit judges. These include an appeal taken by the government in the Gus Menefee murder case. Judge Underwood granted Menefee his freedom after he had served a term of 14 years. He was sentenced for the murder of a fellow seaman at sea.

HOPKINS EQUIPMENT HAS FINE EXHIBIT

An exhibit that is sure to attract considerable attention at the Southeastern Fair is that of the Hopkins Equipment Company in the Liberal Arts building. This pioneer distributing organization, which has served automotive, radio and specialty dealers throughout Georgia for the past 14 years, is featuring three lines of outstandingly popular appeal—Norge Rollator electric refrigerators, Atwater Kent home radios and Motorola auto radio equipment. In their attractive booth latest models of all the products of these leading manufacturers will be shown and demonstrated to fair visitors.

Having enjoyed exceptional popularity this year, it is natural that Norge Rollator refrigerators should occupy the place of honor in the Hopkins exhibit. Following their introduction in this territory by this distributor two years ago, Norge refrigerators, with their unique and practical features, have come into widespread favor and this season have been one of the best selling lines in the state. Norge dealers are to be found in every community throughout Georgia and Norge owners and users are outspoken in their praise of this leading line of home refrigerating equipment.

In commenting on the success of his organization with the Norge line, W. D. V. Hopkins, president of the company, pays high tribute to the Norge mechanical design, responsible, beyond question, for the success of Norge throughout the country. "In the Norge Rollator," states Mr. Hopkins, "we have the one unique and outstanding feature in the mechanical unit of household refrigerators since this industry was born some 18 years ago. As against the conventional, autogenous or reciprocating type of compressor, featured by all other manufacturers prior to the introduction of Norge, the Norge corporation offers a mechanical unit of extreme simplicity design, small and compact in size, low in cost of operation, and having only three moving parts—all of which operate at a comparatively slow speed in a permanent bath of oil—thus assuring almost unlimited life with freedom from friction and wear."

In the Hopkins exhibit there will be shown and demonstrated at frequent intervals during fair week, a cut-away model of a full-size Norge Rollator whereby the action of this unit and its remarkable simplicity may be clearly shown. Fair visitors who are interested in electrical refrigeration, as all home owners are and properly should be, will wisely avail themselves of this opportunity to see just how a refrigerating unit works.

But while the Rollator is the heart of the Norge, as the mechanical unit of every refrigerator must necessarily be, it is not the only feature that will interest the prospective refrigerator owner. Every home owner is interested in adding equipment that will contribute to the comfort, the convenience and the economy of household operation, but he—or as invariably the case when the refrigeration problem is under consideration—she—will insist on beauty as well as mechanical superiority and dependability.

"Comparable to the complete and interesting refrigerator display that Hopkins Equipment Company is offering," said Mr. Hopkins, "will be their initial showing and demonstration of the latest models of the famous Atwater Kent radios."

"This popular line, which has for many years led in sale and public acceptance in the Georgia and the nation, is one that will attract quick attention at this season when the world is on the air, and when it is the radio that is the very latest in radios embody recent developments which bring surpassing quality of tone and reception to the finger-tip command of every radio listener."

"Atwater Kent radios were introduced in Georgia by the Hopkins organization some 14 years ago. They have been sold and installed in homes in every city, town and hamlet throughout the state. Probably to an extent that no other radio can boast, many present Atwater Kent owners have never owned any other radio set—so thoroughly satisfied have they been with the quality and performance of the different models of Atwater Kent radios they have used, but this year, beyond all others, the Atwater Kent line is pointed for definite leadership in the industry. In the technique of radio engineering, in quality of workmanship and materials, in beauty of cabinet design and in all-around performance, the 1934 Atwater Kent models which are being shown by Hopkins Equipment Company at the fair, represent a crowning achievement of a pioneer manufacturer. Ranging from tiny compact sets to full-size consoles with all models embodying the latest developments in long and short-wave reception. Atwater Kent—the Radio with the Golden Voice—marks new accomplishments on the part of the manufacturer, new sensations and new satisfaction on the part of the owner."

Supplementing their radio activities in the field of home reception, the Hopkins Equipment Company have for the past six months been supplying the trade with Motorola automobile radios. The automobile owner now realizes that he can get his favorite program without moving out of his car—no matter where he may be.

It took a lot of engineering to accomplish the perfection so easily demonstrated in the Motorola automobile radio of today, but the results have justified the effort as thousands of Motorola owners are ready to testify. Motorola is one of the pioneers in this field and Motorola has perfected and is offering three all-electric automobile models—all of which are on display and will be demonstrated during fair week at the booth of the Hopkins Equipment Company in the Liberal Arts building.

GIANT SEARCHLIGHTS TO ILLUMINATE FAIR

Two Special Generators Are
for U. S. S. Charleston.

Four giant searchlights will play across the sky from Lakewood park during the Southeastern Fair. These giant lights can be seen as far as 60 miles.

Specially built for installation on the U. S. S. Charleston, the lights never achieved their objective, their course having been altered by one of the naval armament conferences which sent the partially-built Charleston to the junk heap.

S. J. Sedlmayr, general manager of the Royal American Shows, purchased the battery of lights and set about having them installed on a tower truck. However, after the lights were installed and ready for operation it was discovered that the electric current at the various fair grounds was not the current on which the lights had been brought up on to operate at their best. This necessitated the purchase of two big special-built generators which were installed on two trucks. The group of searchlights now consists of three trucks.
The lights are mounted on towers atop two of the trucks and are connected by a catwalk. It requires the full attention of one man to operate these beam giants, which have 50,000,000 candlepower each.

Hats, gloves and square pocketties of real zebra skin, are popular in Paris.

35,000 Square Feet Is Taken For G. M. Exhibit at the Fair

One entire building with a floor space of 35,000 square feet has been made ready for the General Motors exhibit at the Southeastern Fair. This will be the largest single exhibit at the fair this year.

In addition to occupying the entire building, the Eastern Air Transport Corporation, a unit of General Motors, will have on display directly outside of the building a Curtiss King-Bird passenger plane, together with a night mail plane. An interesting feature of this exhibit will be the radio equipment in the Curtiss King-Bird, which will be equipped with amplifiers and tuned in and in direct communication with planes in the air between Atlanta and New York.

Radio Station WSB has erected a studio in the exhibit hall, where music will be furnished daily by Perry Bechtel and his 12-piece orchestra, and WSB will broadcast programs each day from the General Motors exhibit.

The Ethyl Gasoline Corporation, another unit of General Motors, will have one of the most unusual exhibits, which is in some respects a reproduction of their exhibit at the World's Fair. This is an apparatus which demonstrates the effect of straight and Ethyl gasoline in a motor. This is very interesting and of educational value.

Chevrolet, "First in Value and First in Sales," will have a complete exhibit of their line.

Pontiac, "The World's Largest Builder of Straight Eights," will be on display.

Oldsmobile, "The Style Leader for 1933," will show a complete line of their "style leaders."

Buick will exhibit, "The Car that Outdoes All Other Eight Cylinder Cars in Its Price Range Combined."

Cadillac and LaSalle alone will have a $25,000 exhibit of fine motor cars.

General Motors Truck Corporation will feature the "General Motors Valve-in-Head Engine" and most advanced truck and trailer equipment.

United Motors Service will display their new Delco 5,000 watt light plant, and an outstanding feature of this is the new "AB Control." This new control is a master-mind that automatically takes care of the batteries in every way, an exclusive feature with Delco.

Of interest is the fact that Delco is the first manufacturer of home lighting plants and the first home lighting plant was designed and developed by Mr. Charles F. Kettering, now vice president of General Motors in charge of research.

The Delco appliance exhibit will also include deep and shallow well water systems, Delcogas, vacuum cleaners, fans, irons and other appliances.

Frigidaire will feature their new electric refrigeration that uses less current than the ordinary electric bulb. There are 1,000,000 more Frigidaires in use than any other one make of electric refrigeration and of interest to the local public is the fact that Frigidaire service has been uninterrupted in Atlanta for the last fifteen years.

General Motors Acceptance Corporation will also be represented. This is the financial division of General Motors.

General Motors has brought to the Southeastern Fair the greatest assemblage of automobiles, trucks and other products ever brought together by a single company at a state fair.

ROOFING COMPANY HAS SALES INCREASE

Increase in sales was reported on Saturday by the Georgia Roofing and Supply Company, 82 Mangum street.

With prices on all commodities rising rapidly, and rainy winter months soon coming, wise home owners will have their roofs inspected, and any damages repaired immediately, F. R. McWaters, manager of the company, asserted.

"The NRA, in addition to increasing wages and the number of employees, is sending prices rapidly up," Mr. McWaters said. "The present time sees them appreciably lower than they will be for months to come."

A complete line of Flintkote roofing materials is carried by the Georgia Roofing and Supply Company, including the Setab asphalt shingles.

The company also does sheet metal work, fixes and applies gutters and downspouts. It specializes in bonded built-up roofing for industrial plants.

All lines of roofing, including slate, tile and asbestos, are carried by the company. Estimates are made free of charge.

The company also maintains a staff of trained mechanics, all experienced roofing men, Mr. McWaters said, and will give a 10-year guarantee on both material and labor.

This company also carries a complete line of Acme quality paint and will gladly furnish estimates on this class of work.

HARVESTER COMPANY WILL HAVE EXHIBIT

The International Harvester Company will have a complete exhibit at the Southeastern Fair, the company announced Saturday.

It will exhibit a number of new and interesting machines, having reserved quite a large space in order to show the latest equipment, both in power farming equipment and industrial power machines.

Of particular interest will be their new crawler-type Diesel tractor and power unit, a radical departure in construction from the usual type of Diesel motor, also the new F-12 Farmall and other types of wheel tractors, as well as the latest models of motor trucks, including their new 1-2 ton and 1-1/2 ton models and various other machines from their extensive lines, the new No. 7 enclosed gear-type mower being prominent among the interesting innovations that will be exhibited.

BE SURE to see the really modern ice refrigerators on display at our exhibit at the Liberal Arts Building.

Science has recently overturned old-fashioned conceptions of refrigeration by this simple, four-word announcement: "Cold is not enough."

"The function of refrigeration is the maintenance of food in its natural condition, keeping intact all the original freshness, flavor, bouquet, and water content. Defined thus, the prevention of decay becomes only an item," sums up the Refrigeration Engineer's concept.

He demands four vital factors: 1. Proper relative humidity; 2. Uniform, uninterrupted cold below 50 degrees;

3. Rapid circulation; 4. Air purity. Only real ice in a modern refrigerator produces all these fundamental requirements for it provides a constant current of cold, ice-washed, pure air which circulates through every part of your refrigerator, refreshing and vitalizing food.

The refrigerators we offer you now bring you all these advantages, together with modern, delightful designs and colors. You will be proud to own one of these new refrigerators, not only because of their appearance, but because of the efficiency with which they guard your food and your health.

The money you save will quickly pay for the new unit and bring you many dollars in annual dividends.

MRS. C. P. DOHERTY DIES IN BOSTON, MASS.

The Former Miss Katie Martin Was Widely Known in Red Cross Work.

Mrs. C. P. Doherty, of Revere, Mass., formerly Miss Katie Martin, of Atlanta, died suddenly Thursday morning in Boston, Mass. Mrs. Doherty had spent the summer with her mother, Mrs. L. P. Martin, at her home, 409 Lawton street, Atlanta, and upon her return to Massachusetts felt slightly ill, but did not consider her condition in any way serious. Her death came as a shock to family and friends. Before her marriage, she served faithfully as an attaché of the American Red Cross, rendering valuable service in aiding victims of fires, hurricanes, and other disasters in many sections. She also is well remembered in connection with her overseas service with the American Red Cross during the World War.

Surviving Mrs. Doherty are her husband, C. P. Doherty, of Revere, Mass.; her mother, Mrs. L. P. Martin, of Atlanta; two sisters, Miss Julia Martin, Atlanta; Mrs. G. L.

Jones, Richmond, Va.; and four brothers: Walter S., Frank R., and James R. Martin, all of Atlanta, and George R. Martin, of Asheville, N. C. Funeral services will be held at 11 o'clock Monday morning at Spring Hill, Dr. M. A. Cooper officiating, with interment at West View cemetery. Pallbearers will be H. M. Ry- lee, E. Hightower, G. W. Brooks, W. A. Joiner, Charles Clarke and Charles Kimsey.

IMPLEMENT CONCERN TO HAVE FAIR DISPLAY

The Evans Implement Company, 509-71 Whitehall street, will have an exceptional display at the Southeastern fair this year.

Equipment for farmers and dairymen will be more extensive in the exhibit than ever before, the company said. In addition to the complete McCormick-Deering line they will display the latest Gravelly Garden tractor and mowers and the Meadows grist mills, Hammer mills and wood saws.

They will also display all equipment needed for the large estates, lawns, parks, cemeteries and golf courses. The 1934 Ideal power mowers, grass seeders, fertilizer distributors and sprinklers offer many improvements.

For 10 years the Evans Implement Company have specialized in their line of equipment.

This group of midgets is seen doing their bit at the Southeastern Fair. They are getting things in readiness for the opening of the midway, which this year promises surprisingly good attractions for visitors.

KING BIRD PLANE

WILL BE SHOWN

A giant King Bird multi-motored plane, smaller brother of the mammoth Condors that fly in passenger service between Atlanta and New York, will be one of the first sights to greet the eyes of visitors to the Southeastern Fair this week. The King Bird and a fleet of Pitcairn mail wings, which is on the mail line between Atlanta and New York, are the two central figures of the Eastern Air Transport Company's exhibit on the plaza, near the entrance of Lakewood.

The E. A. T. exhibit, part of the General Motors Company display at the fair, has been designed to give the layman a better idea of aviation. In addition to the two big planes, a microphone has been installed on the King Bird and a radio operator in attendance at all hours will contact the planes in flight between here and New York city, and the visitors will be able to hear the regular reports as the pilot makes them while in flight.

The radio in the ground plane and the ones in the planes in flight were developed here in Atlanta by E. B. Gray, of E. A. T. They weigh less than 50 pounds and are combination voice and code instruments, and also are capable of receiving the department of commerce's radio direction beam.

In addition to the two planes and the radio demonstrations, EAT has arranged to display a complete instrument board. This board will contain all of the instruments, including an artificial horizon and other such instruments as were used by Wiley Post on his recent globe-circling flight, according to John K. Ottley Jr., division traffic manager of E. A. T.

Your visit to the Fair would be incomplete if you didn't stop in and make a thorough inspection of the Buick Straight Eight for 1933.

Of course you've seen these fine Buicks on the highway, and doubtless you have remarked upon their new and modern styling—their smooth and quiet performance—but while you are at the Fair you can examine them carefully and learn why Buick leads all other cars in its price class.

We invite you especially to look at the Buick Straight Eight Valve-in-Head engine which provides the extra power, the extra swiftness and smoothness for which Buick is famous the world over. Buick has built more than 2,700,000 of these engines during the past 30 years. We also want you to see what Fisher has done to provide Buick with a big, roomy, comfortable body with Fisher Controlled Ventilation, the greatest improvement in comfort and safety since the introduction of the closed body.

We urge you to see these new Buick Straight Eights which are making history on the sheer merit of their performance, their unquestioned dependability and their marvelous stamina. You will come away with a renewed appreciation of Buick's 30-year reputation for building fine, reliable motor cars.

U. S. FUNDS TO KEEP ALL SCHOOLS OPEN FOR FULL SESSIONS

county school superintendents for appointments and to furnish them all with information concerning their ability and give special reference to the need for the employment of teachers. The state is to pay a minimum of $12.50 a week, although no net scale of pay has been determined upon, the relief commission having the authority to fix the salary of teachers at any figure it sees fit.

Dr. Collins said he was instructing the various county school superintendents of the state to report showing the exact status of the institutions under their direction and to report how long the schools could remain open under the funds on hand. "If the statement of the county superintendents shows that the schools cannot be kept open for a term equal in length to that of the school year 1930-1931, the necessary amount of money to provide for such a term will be made available from federal relief funds," Dr. Collins said.

The advancement of the federal funds has solved one of the gravest problems ever to confront school authorities in Georgia. The superintendent declared, after that the program the counties are able to provide additional teachers if their schools are overcrowded. "For months we have been wondering how many of the rural schools would be able to operate this year, but at last the solution to this great problem appears to be found," Dr. Collins said. "We are assured of a full-length term according to the standards of 1930 and 1931. If the schools are able to pay their teachers for only three of the fourth term, the Georgia relief commission will make up the balance with funds advanced by Mr. Hopkins."

Dr. Collins said that, while it was impossible to give an accurate estimate he felt that the re-employment program in the counties would provide work for 10,000 teachers while the literacy eradication and vocational training work would provide jobs for perhaps 8,000 additional teachers. According to the 1930 census there are 210,736 illiterates in Georgia. "If we could reach all of these people," said Dr. Collins, "we might be able to give work-relief employment to approximately 5,000 unemployed teachers and at the same time render a great social and economic service to the people of Georgia, for all of us know that the earning power of these people would be greatly increased through the educational opportunities that will be offered in this plan."

These literacy classes are open to any and all persons in Georgia, over 14 years of age, who have not completed the grades of the common school. A number of subjects will be taught including reading, writing, arithmetic and civics. Suggestions for conducting such classes are now being developed by the state department of education.

DOZENS PROMISED TO AID BUSINESS

R. F. C. Pledges Millions To Help Concerns Handicapped by NRA

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Millions of dollars in loans were promised today by the reconstruction corporation to enable business establishments handicapped by inadequate working capital to live up to the NRA requirements. This was announced by the corporation as informed circles looked for other important developments within the next few days in the administration's effort to release the credit stream the $2,000,000,000 held up in closed banks.

The R. F. C. planned to make its loans through banks ordinarily run for six months or less. It said, however, that construction loans would be permitted for three years. Short-term money will be made available to the banks at 3 per cent interest and they can charge 5 per cent. Long term funds will be provided at 4 per cent and the banks can loan them at no more than 6 per cent. The short term funds must be used for:

Purchase of materials for manufacture. Actual cost of labor in manufacture and processing of materials. To aid merchants and others affected by the national recovery administration.

One of the moves expected by authoritative sources in opening up the closed banks is a revaluation of securities held in their vaults to bring them more in line with their present worth. When the bank holiday was declared security values were at a low ebb, but since then they have risen materially.

In addition, these sources expect an easing of the requirements of the reconstruction corporation for purchasing preferred stock. At present the corporation requires banks selling it such stock to show that the securities will earn 5 or 6 per cent.

In the case of reorganization, the requirement usually is made that an equal amount of common stock be sold to depositors on the public. The corporation has available more than a billion dollars for straight loans.

phases of the swing in her room until late hours at night. "Her love for the game, her personality and diligent practice have enabled her to develop her own game and the only improvement that now can be made will be brought with time. Her lack of distance is caused only by her young age."

Howard "Papa" Beckett also will tell you, if you will listen, that Dorothy will some day be ranked with the best in the world. In fact, "Papa" will dwell at length on how his young protégée came through in the state tourney after being out of her young age. The tourney, which prevented her from practicing.

Miss Kirby is the youngest player ever to win her state women's title. Weighing less than 100 pounds, she is one of the calmest persons in the course. Good shots—bad shots—they're all the same to Dorothy. She had once never better her and she's always thinking of the next one. SPORTSMANSHIP PRAISED. Praises were showered on Dorothy at East Lake for the new champion. Her sportsmanship in praising her opponents when they made good shots and her graciousness when she lost were commended, made her extremely popular with opponent and gallery alike.

She hits a short drive, but her shots are in the green, and she usually sweeps them in for a "gimme." When Dorothy returns to her classes at the O'Keefe Junior High school, she will be hailed as a champion. Although she is just a "freshman," she graduated at the Tenth Street school in June and entered O'Keefe this fall.

The Capital City Country Club proudly announces to the world that Dorothy Kirby is the new champion. A visit out Brookhaven way will convince you that Dorothy Kirby will carry on the golf tradition which Kirby, Charles Yates and other Atlantans have established. They're that way about Dorothy.

And so Atlanta and Georgia hail another champion. Miss Dorothy Kirby, 1933 women's golf champion of the state of Georgia—and don't forget those 13 years.

New York, 1,000 radiator workers in Bayonne, N. J., and 6,000 shoe workers in Brockton, Mass., all continued on strike.

Weymouth, W. Va., has 15,000 striking steel workers with prospects for agreement considerably brightened by Weirton Steel Company officials' plan to aid the unemployed teachers and to enable the schools to operate a normal school term during the school year of 1933-34.

A United States Steel Corporation subsidiary, the company was heavily picketed yesterday by 4,000 striking Fayette county coal miners who sought to force it to close. They later withdrew because of the coal agreement. Then the steel workers voted to strike.

Meantime, end of the soft coal strike was seen with inclusion of "captive mines" (mines owned by code provisions. President Roosevelt's signing of the agreement putting the bituminous coal code into effect Monday, undoubtedly means the end of the strike," said Patrick T. ## PEANUTS LEADING BACK TO PROSPERITY, SAYS ANDERSON

COTTON EXECUTIVE
IN NEW SPEECHPurposes and Results of President's Recovery
Plans Analyzed Before
Newnan Rotary Club.

NEWNAN, Ga., Sept. 30.—Speaking before the Newnan Rotary Club, W. D. Anderson, president of the Bibb Manufacturing Company and one of the leading textile executives in the country, declared that the national recovery program has achieved already one of the most remarkable successes in the history of modern government, but added that the battle was, as yet, by no means won.

"To me," he said, "it seems stupid to entertain the idea that in seven short months any plan could have been devised, enacted into law by congress and put into operation that would have already brought prosperity, full-fledged and unimpeded, upon the suffering promise of individual wealth."

Mr. Anderson declared that he believes there is plenty of justification for the contention that the depression which gripped the world between the fall of 1929 and the early spring of 1933 was the worst this nation has ever experienced. Referring to the statistics of 1932, 1933, 1934, 1935 and 1936, Mr. Anderson declared that several were terrific in their intensity, but voiced also the belief that "March 4, last, may be taken as the low point in our history."

"Disaster," he said, "had piled on disaster. The courage of our people had reached a low ebb. Our morale was broken. We had suffered almost a complete paralysis of will and we stood with bowed heads, a nation without a leader."

He then recited the program launched immediately after the inauguration by President Roosevelt and told how, step by step, this program had been enacted by congress and later put into operation.

To Meet Emergency.
After explaining that the industrial recovery bill and the agricultural adjustment act are both temporary enactments, both based upon the existence of a national emergency, Mr. Anderson said:

"It will be productive of error in our thinking, if we imagine that there is anything like 'magic' in this legislation. I am sure that neither the president nor the congress expected that the passage of this bill and its approval by the president, like the waving of a conjurer's wand, would cause prosperity to suddenly 'burst in our faces,' to use the expression of the negro who had his hand pressed with a closed hand where all his money was deposited. Many seem to have that idea and, having it, are complaining bitterly that it is not coming."

"This legislation and the president's recovery program based on it is not so much a new experiment, to use an expression that is commonly applied to it, as many seem to think it to be. Neither do I consider it to be a revolution in our government of the character which many seem to think it to be. On the contrary, it seems to me to be a temporary return to the old and tried policies under which this nation grew to great power and wealth and to great prestige and under the supervision of government, in order to prevent injustice being done to any class."

"It seems to me to provide co-operation of the finest type between all classes of people and all kinds of business, crystallized into universal practices by common consent, with the program protected by law and supervised by a benign government."

Three-Point Program.
"While I have not seen the matter so tabulated by the experts, it seems to me that the president's program might be described as a three-point program:

1.—A move to balance the budget of the United States and thus save our national credit, this being provided for in (a) the reorganization act, (b) the national economy act.

2.—The far-reaching bill, designed to give immediate assistance to our first-line producers of new wealth.

3.—The national recovery act, designed to assist business and the working man.

"Some have contended that in the passage of these bills, the congress of the United States abdicated in favor of a dictator, or at least that dictatorial powers were conferred upon the president."

"I do not think this is hardly a fair statement of the case. It is true that the congress, in the emergency which confronted the country, merely delegated to the president the power to do quickly and effectively the things that could not be done by a large legislative body."

"Let us examine the results:

Three Big Results.
"1.—Our national credit is restored. The budget is balanced, so far as ordinary expenses are concerned. Adequate taxes have been levied. Pay service charges and amortization for extraordinary expenditures being made."

"2.—The psychology of the country is changed. Instead of being hopeless we are all hopeful and full of enthusiasm for the future."

"3.—The program launched under the national recovery act proposes to restore the purchasing power of the country through a program of paying living wages to those already employed and the re-employment of millions who are out of work at a wage that will enable them to become buyers of the products of farm and factory."

Cotton-Picking
Named in Cartersville

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., Sept. 30.—The winners of the 13th annual cotton-picking contest, held at the Euharlee district, were called the cotton-picking champions for their age, has created quite a bit of interest in Cartersville. James Harris Allen, 13-year-old boy of the Sugar Valley community, writes that he picked 367 pounds in one day. Miss Matilda Lee, 13-year-old girl of Cartersville, picked 335 pounds, and the C. L. Myrick boys, all champions, picked the following amounts: D. C. L. 337 pounds; C. L. 322 pounds; Clarence, 312 pounds, and Guy, 314 pounds.

GEORGIA STUDENT ARDENT HITLERITE

Young German, at Athens
On Exchange Plan,
Praises Nazi Chief.

ATHENS, Ga., Sept. 2.—(P)—Gerhardt Paul, graduate of the Prussian University at Marburg, and a strong supporter of the Hitler government in Germany, has enrolled in the graduate school of the University of Georgia.

Paul comes to the University of Georgia on an exchange arrangement under the auspices of the institution of international education. Next year a student from the University of Georgia will be sent to Germany through the same organization for advanced study in a German university.

The Hitler government is vastly misunderstood in this country," said Paul. "It has done much in building up Germany, uniting the various states, unifying the economy, and destroying the menace of communism."

He said that 90 per cent of the youth of Germany were in favor of the Hitler government. He termed the Jewish question a minor political one which has been taken up in America in a manner out of proportion to its importance in Germany.

"I am surprised," he said, "that you don't get excited about the persecution of the Jews in Germany. I believe the status of the Jews in Germany is an internal problem. Hitlerites have lost their lives in political murder, and nothing has been said of that." He said the Jews are not being persecuted.

Paul will specialize in English and history in which he will do research work at the university here.

Commodity prices have been inflated in Germany in the last few years, and the shortening of the working hours provides for the absorption of these commodities with comfort to the buyer. It is plain now that at the height of the depression, the German government referred to, we literally walked into the chaos of exhausted purchasing power.

On Road Back.
"If, as some think, we are today treading on ground that is a bit shaky, there is the saving thought that the passage of this bill and its approval by the president, like the waving of a conjurer's wand, would cause prosperity to suddenly 'burst in our faces,' to use the expression of the negro who had his hand pressed with a closed hand where all his money was deposited. Many seem to have that idea and, having it, are complaining bitterly that it is not coming."

"This legislation and the president's recovery program based on it is not so much a new experiment, to use an expression that is commonly applied to it, as many seem to think it to be. Neither do I consider it to be a revolution in our government of the character which many seem to think it to be. On the contrary, it seems to me to be a temporary return to the old and tried policies under which this nation grew to great power and wealth and to great prestige and under the supervision of government, in order to prevent injustice being done to any class."

While some of the 87 veterans who attended the reunion in Quinlan last year have died, the local U. D. C. expects others to take their places and the attendance will be greater this year.

Veterans from all sections of the state, members of the U. D. C., Sons of Confederate Veterans, pages, sponsors and maid-of-honor are expected for the reunion.

Entertainment features planned by Mrs. R. E. Dasher, president of the Valdosta U. D. C., included a cake walk, popular when the veterans were young, dinners and rides over the surrounding country.

High boys and girls scouts will act as guides and run errands for the visitors.

Colonel Raymond Gay and G. W. Suttles, the U. D. C. chapter, in Lowndes county, will be on the welcoming committee.

General J. L. Driver, of Hapeville, commander of the Georgia division, will preside at the business sessions.

ALPHARETTA, Ga., Sept. 30.—An experiment in community building, in which every agency of the state government co-operates to promote improved farming, home-making and civic development, has been undertaken in this farming area, 27 miles from Atlanta, and the folks here say the plan is "working just fine."

It is one of the projects sponsored by Philip Welner, Atlanta lawyer and sociologist, who left a busy professional career to become a volunteer in the state's far-flung university system.

The chancellor says "the folks in this district and the folks in this section, the whole plan is working just fine. The experiment is working for the betterment of every phase of community life, it says."

"If any one person deserves credit for it, it's Mr. Welner. He hadn't even dreamed about it until one day he stopped at a filling station and discussed it with a few of the men who were hanging around."

Alpharetta and the nearby community of Crabapple are included in the plan, which has spread to include a large area in the northern end of Fulton county.

J. J. Rucker, one of the farmers aiding in the movement, says "the whole plan is working just fine. It started last year at this time, and you can see lots of improvements already. Last September, after Mr. Welner held a survey of the soil, a steering committee of six farmers. We went down to Atlanta one day and the chancellor took us around to every office in the capital. They told us what their functions were, and in what way they could help us, and we got 100 per cent co-operation."

A health survey by the state health department was the first project. Every child in this area was given a physical examination, and a study made of the diet, the water supply, and a swamp had developed along Big creek," said E. L. Rhodes, another member of the committee of six, "and after the survey, the county dynamited a ditch in the swamp, and the waters on down to the Chattahoochee river."

The steering committee studied various community problems and called

A health survey by the state health department was the first project. Rhodes, another member of the committee of six, "and after the survey, the county dynamited a ditch in the swamp, and the waters on down to the Chattahoochee river."

The steering committee studied various community problems and called on the various state agencies when they got ready to tackle them.

Experts at the agricultural experiment station at Griffin, a unit of the university system, outlined a soil-building program. "We planted winter cover crops, and also small grain. Our corn crop sure looked fine this year, due to soil building with cover crops," said Rhodes. "And we have more small grain for home and farm use."

Miss Lois Stillman, a teacher in the community school, gave a series of lectures on home making, canning, cooking, diet and that sort of thing. "The women are enthusiastic about the program," said Rhodes.

"They developed a new kind of wheat at the experiment station, well suited to this section. Most all of us are using it, and will share our seed with those who are not when we plant the next crop. We are all growing one variety of cotton. It helps us find a better market for it," he added.

"The state has analyzed soils in our section, and this helped a lot. We are raising and growing the soil, and are growing more truck crops, chiefly for home use. We have established a community cannery. We bought a pressure cooker and the county gave us a steam boiler."

"The boiler," interrupted Rucker, "was seized in a whisky still raid, and 'now not an animal has been raised in this section since the department made forestry survey. organized fire fighting units and gave instruction in practical forestry; ## TECH 39, CLEMSON 2---GEORGIA 20, N. C. STATE 10

JACKETS SHOW NEW OFFENSE IN FIRST GAME

Varied Attack Nets Six Touchdowns Over Clemson Eleven.

By Jimmy Jones.

Recovering swiftly from a first quarter mix-up on signals which saw Carl Shaw's snap from center go winging back over their goal line where Norris Dean was pinned for a safety, Georgia Tech's football team aroused its latent scoring powers to roll up six touchdowns in rapid and consecutive order Saturday at Grant field and submerge the rugged Tigers of Clemson College, 39-2.

A crowd estimated roundly at 14,000 persons, patiently enduring the bad start and the blistering sun, as well as Coach Alexander's gold and white athletes rebound from the mental lapse and gather offensive momentum until, late in the game, they were putting touchdowns on the Carolinians practically as they listed.

SHAW HINTS ONE.

The first-day fans had barely seated themselves and purchased the first of a series of soft drinks when Young Shaw, partially confused by a muffled signal and naturally a bit nervous from starting his first varsity game, shot the ball back through daylight, past the amazed eyes of Fullback Dean and on into the great beyond that lay behind the goal line.

Dean chased madly after it as the spectators screamed encouragement. He managed barely to catch up with the suddenly liberated spheroid when he was low-bridged by the 170 pounds of Stanley Fellers, charging Clemson end, and nailed to the ground, along with the ball.

This gave Clemson the only lead the team held during the game and it was very, very short lived.

THE NEW SHIFT.

The Tech team was experimenting with the newfangled hop-skip-and-jump shift which Coach Alexander has worked out this year and was not quite on to all its intricacies. This may explain the two bad snaps over the goal line which Shaw unceremoniously one of which was cancelled by a penalty—and also a penalty of 15 yards which the Jackets drew for hurrying the shift.

It is right nifty to look at though, is Mr. Alexander's latest creation. Tech teams are pioneers in offensive maneuvering. First, there was the Heisman's celebrated jump shift, then Alexander's reversed quarterback which other teams, including Kentucky, have copied and now the "crow-hop" shift. This one is a shift of the line and backfield with all the line-men, saving the center who is over the ball, of course, reversing and wheeling before the snap, the quarter-back facing back and the two half-backs doing a neat two-step into a double wing attack.

It resembles somewhat the military shift of Chick Meahan and Herbie Robertson, and has the combined appearance of an old-fashioned game of craps with kibitzers and an Indian camp-fire. Timing and blocking, the "crow-hop" shift should become effective. To say the least, it is momentarily disconcerting to an opposing line and backfield and is pleasing to the eye.

THEY GET GOING.

Once the Tech boys mastered the shift and recovered from the mental lapse, they started hopping about and advanced the football with military-like surges.

They went ahead soon after the second quarter got under way. Davis plunged over from the one-yard line after a forward pass, Phillips fullback, had gained 13 yards. A pass from Jimmy Slocum, had previously gained 20 yards and put the ball on the Clemson 14. John Wilcox missed the kick and Tech was ahead, 6 to 2.

Before one could say "seat," the Jackets had scored another, this time one a short buck by Jack (The Happer) Phillips, after Sun Dial Martin, a sophomore, had placed it on the one-yard line with a 13-yard run. This time John Wilcox kicked the extra point and Tech led at the half, 13 to 2.

The third quarter saw two more scores, one coming when "Lee" Williams, the big right tackle, crashed through and blocked Trentman's kick inside the 20, and Bob Thorne, kicking through, placed it on the one-yard line and ran for a touchdown. Eddie Laws assayed the kick and missed it.

DAVIS SCORES.

That made it 19-2, and Wink Davis, the fire-haired boy, made it 25-2 soon after when he bucked over from the two-yard line after Galloway had executed a pass to Tommy Spradling to that point. The try point was blocked.

Billy Street, also a sophomore, made the fifth touchdown on a reverse after Pug Boyd, his old team mate at Tech high, had done some nice one-on field running to place the ball within striking distance. Martin sprinted 10 yards around end for the last one, which made it 30-2 and a football game.

Coach Alexander used 20 football players because of the heat. In fact, every man on his squad but one, "Circus" Lyons, a center, who was on probation because of scholastic deficiencies. His place will be taken by Mutt Morris, an ex-guard recently.

'Key' to Success Scores on a Pass

HOMER KEY (11), TAKES PASS AT POINT MARKED X FROM GRIFFITH (34), AND SCORES FOR GEORGIA IN FIRST PERIOD AGAINST N. C. STATE.

SANFORD STADIUM, ATHENS, Ga., Sept. 30.—Sitting in the stadium looking around before the North Carolina State-Georgia game, it becomes interesting to observe how the tempo of life grows.

At first it is quite still except for the chitter-chatter of the telegraph instruments as the men line up the wires which go out to Atlanta, North Carolina and New York.

The telegraph remains to me a much more wonderful achievement than radio. Radio gets along through the air. Which isn't so wonderful. But to be actually tied up with some other person by thousands of miles of wire is something else.

Sanford stadium happens to be perhaps the most beautiful setting for football which the south boasts. The turf is thick and as soft as one of those Axminster rugs which used to be one of grandma's ambitions for the parlor floor.

It is an emerald green and the white cross-marks make a pattern which is tremendously exciting to the eye, and when the football teams came on, the scene was really as striking as any ever achieved by any of our theatrical geniuses. The North Carolina State team wore white jerseys with vivid crimson markings. The Georgia team wore the old-fashioned red shirts, reminiscent of the old days.

These, with the brown of their football trousers, made up a color symphony which was striking indeed. When I get back I must order a brown suit, an emerald green and crimson shirt.

Georgia's stadium sits in a ravine. And the tops of the ravine are landscaped and covered with honeysuckle. About the playing field is an oval of hedge, thick and green. I recall that four years ago, when Georgia opened the stadium by beating Yale, this hedge was a young thing and could not leave its mother. Can it be that the years are getting by?

THE TEMPO INCREASES.

Spectators begin to arrive. The freshmen, more than 300 of them, come first. They come from all of Georgia, from its cities and its farms. And beneath those red caps there must have been more than one thought that this is life—that the old home and high school are left behind. It seems to be great to be a freshman and wear a red cap and cheer. And look at the freshmen co-eds.

I wandered down. There are already admiring glances from the freshman benches over to those where the freshman co-eds sit, modestly dressed in the dresses which mother told them to wear only on Sundays as it will probably be Thanksgiving before your father can afford a new one for you. Well, this is almost Sunday. It's Saturday.

The heat isn't doing the mascara and the rouge any good. I can tell you that. The mascara, which is terrible stuff at best, is threatening to run.

It's hot and that new fall suit which son got just before he left from home, with adjurations from mother not to wear it every day, is being shed, coat and vest. About 15 boys climbed the fence at the east end of the

Texas Aggies Defeat Tulane In Close Game

By Gayle Talbot, Associated Press Sports Writer.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Sept. 30.—(AP)—Texas A. & M. defeated Tulane, 13 to 6, today, with a brilliant defensive game that baffled Tulane's aerial play.

Tulane lacked the drive that carried it to victories in recent seasons, and the Aggies were steady and alert to take advantage of every break in the game.

The Aggies maneuvered into scoring position in the first quarter. Crowe, Aggie guard, intercepted a pass from Bryan, Tulane halfback, on Tulane's 35-yard line. Inaugure, halfback, skirted end for 10 yards. Fowler, fullback, passed to Kimbrough on Tulane's 4-yard line, where it was first down.

On the first play of the second quarter, Domingue, Aggie quarterback, added the final yard needed for a touchdown. Domingue kicked goal.

A feature of the game came in the third period, when Crowe, substitute Aggie quarterback, broke loose from the line and ran from his own 30-yard line to Tulane's 22-yard line. He had a clear field ahead when Brownson, Tulane quarterback, ran him down and tackled him from behind. Two long passes, Couer to Connelley and Couer to Stringfellow, gave Tulane the ball on the Aggie 4-yard line. On the fourth down, Bruno, fullback, scored the touchdown.

Tulane scored in the last few minutes of play. Roberts, halfback, passed to Kyle, who raced 40 yards to the 30-yard line. From there Bruno's runs around the ends and off tackle enabled Army to gain 144 yards with its running game, compared to 63 for Mercer.

Buckler also punted seven times for a total of 301 yards, an average of 43 to the boot. It was his kicking that pushed Mercer back and put Army in position to count its third touchdown in the third quarter.

A BIG SURPRISE.

Buckler's great run for the first score of the game took the crowd by surprise, as Mercer, up north to play both service elevators on consecutive week-ends, had been putting up a stubborn defense. Jack slipped off tackle, and romped to the goal line. Travis Brown place-kicked for the only extra point of the game.

Shortly after the next kick-off, Buckler sailed a pass to big Pete Kopsack, who ran it 15 yards to Mercer's 22-yard line. From there Buckler plunged through to Mercer's 1-yard line in five tries. Stancook took it over.

Mercer was plugging along from its own 37-yard line in the second period when young Lee suddenly took over the spotlight. He ran over to the side line, tucked in a flat pass from Porter, and hot-footed it straight down the line for all he was worth. Five yards from the goal he was felled by Stancook, big Army fullback.

Then, in two tries, Lee shot through for three yards. Porter drove through the center of the Army line for the score.

Mercer Is Beaten At West Point, 19-6

By Gayle Talbot, Associated Press Sports Writer.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Sept. 30.—(AP)—A furious first assault in which "Texas Jack" Buckler, a 160-pound back from Waco, demoralized their opponents with a series of dazzling runs enabled the Army gridders to start their 1933 campaign with a 19-to-6 victory over a Mercer University team today.

Except for Buckler's individual feats of brilliance, it would have been nip and tuck for Uncle Sam's Cadets. The Waco boy scored Army's first touchdown after a 37-yard dash through the entire Mercer team in the opening minutes of play and made the second possible shortly thereafter with a succession of off-tackle smashes that carried the ball to the apron of the invaders' goal line.

From there on the boys from Marion, Ga., gave Lieutenant Garrison Davidson's charges all the battle they could handle, and in the closing period practically fought the Soldiers off their feet.

At the close a crowd of 10,000 could only stand and cheer the plucky scrap put up by the Mercer eleven as a whole and the individual brilliance of one of its members, Robert E. Lee Jr. It was the namesake of the famous southern military leader who paved the way for Mercer's lone touchdown in the second period with a brilliant 38-yard run after receiving a pass, and it was he who was on the receiving end of a succession of tosses from Trommerhauser, that twice threatened the Cadets' goal in the waning minutes of play.

Just how valuable Buckler's rampage in the opening period proved to the Black and Gold is revealed in the statistics. They showed that Mercer, employing a tricky passing game, piled up a total of 14 first downs against Army's 7 and gained an aggregate of 243 yards during the afternoon to Army's 196.

Trommerhauser, a passer who probably could toss footballs into a barrel at 50 yards, completed 12 of the 18 aerials he attempted for a total gain of 178 yards, while the Army's aerial game picked up only 52 yards. From there Buckler's runs around the ends and off tackle enabled Army to gain 144 yards with its running game, compared to 63 for Mercer.

Buckler also punted seven times for a total of 301 yards, an average of 43 to the boot. It was his kicking that pushed Mercer back and put Army in position to count its third touchdown in the third quarter.

'Bama Swamps Petrels Under 34-to-0 Score

By Jack Troy.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Sept. 30.—Oglethorpe saw pink elephants on the ceiling and pink elephants on the floor in Deany stadium this afternoon as the powerful Alabama eleven alternated in making the opening game of the season a decided success by driving through the rain to a 34-to-0 victory.

The game started in intense heat, with a hot sun making the afternoon miserable for spectators and players alike. But as the second period began a sprinkle of rain turned into a veritable torrent and the remainder of the game was played under these conditions.

TIDE COMES THROUGH.

Coach Frank Thomas' husky Tide-men did just what was expected of them. Oglethorpe was no match for the variety and could not gain any ground to speak of against the second team.

The first downs were Alabama 11 and Oglethorpe 4. The Stormy Petrels of Coach Harry Robertson did not register a first down against the Alabama varsity. And of the two made against the second eleven one was a pass and another on a penalty.

The Big Red Regiment, displaying power in every line, marched on to victory without resorting to other than straight football. Scouts at the game saw nothing but a lot of rain, pretty co-eds and two bruising Alabama teams that should be very hard indeed to keep away from the treasure chest of the Southeastern conference.

Chappell, starting with the second team, scored two touchdowns for the day's honors. Howell, McDaniel and Mosley were credited with one each.

GROUND GAINERS.

Howell, fullback, was the leading ground gainer. Howell made 54 yards in seven tries; McDaniel 34 in 13 attempts and Demasovich 37 in 5 attempts.

In all, Alabama gained 143 yards from scrimmage.

BUCK CHAPMAN AND CY GRANT LEAD BULLDOGS

McQuage Place Kicks 50 Yards for Early N. C. S. Lead.

By Ralph McGill.

SANFORD STADIUM, ATHENS, Ga., Sept. 30.—Take a Chance! Jack Griffith led the shock troops of Georgia to a 20-to-10 victory over North Carolina State here this afternoon in the opening game of the season for Harry Mehre's Georgia Bulldogs.

There was uncertainty, hesitancy and rawness in the Georgia attack, but it moved with intelligence and rare daring and skill. "Take a Chance Jack," it was interpreted as a fight out of the States when he sent Cy Grant out with the ball from a punt formation 8 yards behind his own goal line. It made 36 yards.

It was "Take a Chance Jack" who threw a pass into the hands of a running play and gave Georgia her first touchdown.

GRANT TAKES STATE.

It was Cy Grant who was his spear head. Grant sped through the State team to one touchdown across 68 yards of turf. He ran 80 yards to another which was called back by an offside decision. He surged along for more than 100 yards during his stay in the game.

It was Buck Chapman who banged the State line to bits. He harried and worried them all afternoon. He ran up 110 yards through and around them, scoring one touchdown.

And it was Homer Key, looking like a red robin in his Georgia jersey of red, who returned to his 1931 form.

"Take a Chance" Jack Griffith blocked wonderfully well. Once he smashed two men out of the way. He did more blocking than a best cleaning shop on a busy Saturday.

It was Grant who contributed one of the two offensive masterpieces of the afternoon. One was a 50-yard place kick by Bob McQuage, the State halfback.

This was one well-timed, rhythmic effort in the second quarter after State had previously intercepted a pass in the second quarter to score their lone touchdown.

Grant's run came with Georgia leading, 13 to 10. It was the feature of the closing minutes of the last quarter and followed a touchdown run of 80-yards which had been called back because of an offside by both teams.

A GREAT RUN.

It was one of those runs which delight the eye because it includes every single item which a brilliant run should contain.

North Carolina State had punted out of bounds at Georgia's 52-yard line and the ball had been roughed in. The Georgia backfield swung their arms and hopped into a formation at the left of the line. The ball came back. Grant faked with it as if to go to the left and then swung back directly at center.

Homer Key led him through on the play. Then came football as it is played.

First the hole was there. This one was gaping and wide.

The State fullback was coming in as he should have been. Key took him out of the play.

Now Grant was alone. He had been taken past the line of scrimmage. That is all a good back can ask. After that he must shift for himself.

TACKLERS CLOSE IN.

The tacklers were coming in. Bob McQuage, a heroic figure for State, came in and tackled. Grant anticipated it. He counted on it. He was a ballet dancer and swung one leg free. This one went down and as it struck earth he snatched the other free.

But this had delayed him. Linemen were closing in on him but he started in. He was alone. He was alone. Lawrence McDaniel was charging in. Grant was in desperate straits. The side line was near at hand. He counted on it. He was a ballet dancer and swung one leg free. This one went down and as it struck earth he snatched the other free.

The game was won, 13 to 10, without a but I give it in detail because from start to finish it contained all the elements of a great play and there was no football error.

Georgia's victory was a rush. A fumble stopped an early score at State's 3-yard line. This was after a bare seven plays following the recovery of a State fumble. The fumble caused the last charge to be short. Georgia having lost 12 yards on it.

MARCH TO SCORE.

Georgia took the North Carolina State punt at State's 47-yard line and scored in six plays. Key and Chapman advancing the ball to the 16-yard line, where Jack Griffith passed to Key, who ran 8 yards to score. Grant kicked the goal.

There followed some brilliant kicking by Grant and some very hard line-smashing by Chapman. And late in the quarter a quick kick was out of bounds at Georgia's 20. From there

Dorothy Kirby Beats Miss Maddox

YOUTH VICTOR 2 UP IN FINALS AT EAST LAKE

Girl Star Finishes With
"Two-Spot" To Close Match.

By Roy White.

Little Dorothy Kirby, 13-year-old Atlanta star, was crowned champion of Georgia's women golfers Saturday morning on the tough No. 1 East Lake course when she defeated Miss Margaret Maddox, veteran city and state champion, two up.

It was the second major tournament in which the young pupil of Howard Beckett, the Capital City professional, has entered. She went to the third round of the state tournament last year on the Capital City course in her first big venture and was the sensation of the tournament.

Miss Maddox won the southern title several years ago and has won both the state and city crowns. She has won the state crown twice in succession and several invitation tournaments and went to the second round of the national women's tournament this year.

In the qualifying round Monday Dorothy carded an 88, six strokes above Miss Maddox's medal round and won second place in a play-off with Mrs. Mike King.

CHAMP'S MARCH

In her championship round Saturday, the Ansley Park and Capital City star carded a medal of 83 against an 85 for Miss Maddox.

Miss Kirby gained a decided advantage in the early stages of every match and closed them out as early as possible.

The champion from Mrs. Guy Butler, 7-6; eliminated Mrs. R. C. Hale, 8-6; beat Mrs. Roy Burns, 8-7; 6-5, and won from Mrs. Charlie Black Jr., 6-5, in the semi-finals. Her scores during the week were the talk of the participants and seldom ever has a state women's champion marched through the field with such ease.

Miss Maddox swept to the finals with victories over Mrs. Frank Reade, 6-5; Mrs. Roy Burns, 8-7; Mrs. O. W. Miller, 8-6, and Mrs. Ashby Taylor, 7-6.

Miss Kirby did not have the distance on drives as did the defending champion, but what she lacked in driving was made up in large measure on her iron and putting game.

Playing on even terms through four holes, Miss Kirby won the long fifth hole with a par five against a six for Miss Maddox. The island hole was halved and Miss Maddox squared the match at the seventh and finished half square at the turn.

ALL SQUARE

The veteran went into the lead at the tenth, but was squared again as Dorothy took the short 11th. Miss Maddox again went into the lead at the 12th and after halving the 13th, lost the 14th, 15th and 16th holes in rapid succession to go two down and two to go. Miss Maddox rallied to take the long 17th, and was one down and one to go.

Both drives were on the green at the 18th and deciding hole. Miss Kirby dropped her putt for a birdie two and won the title as Miss Maddox two-putted for a par three.

In the championship consolation, Mrs. Mike King, defeated Mrs. R. C. Hale, 3-2.

Mrs. Grady Black beat Miss Lena Willburn, 5-4, in the first flight and Mrs. John Stewart defeated Mrs. Claude Williamson, 7-6, to win the first flight consolation.

City Women's Meet To Open Oct. 16.

Atlanta's women golfers who won all trophies and prizes at the tournament which closed Saturday at East Lake will hold their annual city tournament during the week of October 16 on the Druid King course.

The tournament will again be sponsored by the Atlanta Woman's Golf Association, and every woman golfer in the city is invited to participate.

East Lake Will Stage Tourney.

East Lake's annual losers pay dinner tournament and the close of the tournament schedule will be played Thursday afternoon on the two courses.

Scott Hudson, president of the club, and Colonel Bob Jones have been named team captains and will select their members late Wednesday after all entries have been filed.

Trophies and prizes won during the year will be presented at the dinner which will be served at the club immediately after the close of the afternoon's play.

Every member of the club is invited to participate and reservations should be made with George Bell, club manager, or George Sargent, club professional.

East Lake Flashes Beat Buckhead, 20-0

The East Lake Flashes defeated the Buckhead Bullpups, 20 to 0, Saturday morning at East Lake.

The first touchdown was made in the first quarter when Joe Jones carried the ball around right end. In the third period Charley Jackson scored and in the last Jones again crossed the goal. Both extra points were made by Jackson.

This is the second time this season that the Flashes have defeated the Bullpups. The Flashes will meet the O'ptions' team next Saturday at 2 o'clock at the Rose Bowl. Admission is free.

New Cracker Boss?

Doc Prothro (the smile and all) is shown as he came to Atlanta Friday for a conference with Cracker officials. Prothro, who has been highly successful as third baseman and skipper of the Chickasaws, has held a conference with officials of the club, given his salary terms and will have their decision in a few days. He left yesterday for Memphis to await their acceptance or refusal of his terms.—Staff photo by George Cornett.

Cracker Officials Delay Naming 1934 Manager

Absence of Several Directors Forces Delay;
Prothro and Niehoff Lead Field.

By Jimmy Jones.

The business of naming Atlanta's baseball manager for 1934, believed to be near consummation Friday, has been delayed until the middle of this week, due to the board of directors' wish for further pondering of the situation.

Hughes Spalding, one of the directors, was out of the city yesterday and Colonel T. L. Huston, another director, is at his home near Darien, Ga. Chances are the Atlanta members of the directors board will go down to Brunswick for a conference with Colonel Huston early this week and an announcement will be made immediately thereafter.

Meanwhile, J. T. (Doc) Prothro, considered the leading candidate for the post, has returned to Memphis to await a decision on the proposition he has submitted to the club to come here.

It developed yesterday that the directors had the names of both Prothro and Bert Niehoff, former Atlanta pilot, under consideration and that one of these two men will boss the Crackers next season.

CALLER HERE. Prothro, because of the fact that he was called here for a conference, still considered to have the inside track, although Niehoff is still in the running.

Both managers have been highly successful at directing clubs in the Southern league and it is believed that Atlanta fans would look with high favor upon the appointment of either man to the job of getting the Crackers out of the rut.

Prothro, since he was named manager at Memphis in 1928, succeeding Johnny Dobbs, has won two half-season pennants, one full-time flag, finished a third and second (in 1932) by a fraction of two points. Under him, Memphis has never been out of the first division in the league and has developed several star players. This year his club won the first half, but lost to New Orleans in the play-off, three games to two.

Niehoff, likewise, has been highly successful, having won pennants at Mobile in 1922; Atlanta in 1925, and Chattanooga in 1932. He also has won more Dixie series victories over the Texas champions than any other manager, with two. In 1924, his Atlanta team was runner-up to Memphis with 99 victories, losing the pennant by a nose.

LIKE ATLANTA. It is a well-known fact that both "Doc" and Bert would like to come here. They consider Atlanta ripe for a winning club. Other cities in the league have been spoiled by too many winners, but Atlanta is hungry for one.

Both men are confident that they can improve the situation here. Both are colorful and popular and considered a close match in point of ability. Prothro's contract at Memphis is up this year and Owner Tom Watkins, of that club, has given him free rein to deal for himself. If Prothro comes here, chances are that Frank Braxill or Tommy Taylor will succeed him at Memphis.

Niehoff also is free to negotiate with Atlanta, also, having been given that privilege by President Joe Engel.

ALL NEW YORK BACKS GIANTS TO WIN TITLE

Carl Hubbell To Pitch Opener for Giants; Cronin Remains Silent.

By Alan Gould.
NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP)—The odds began to shorten today on the Washington Senators, world series favorites, with the start of baseball's biggest show less than three days off, public support rallying for the Giants along Broadway and the barriers being let down to give old John J. Fan a better "break" at the box office.

Joe Cronin's definite statement today that his pitching for the opening game has now narrowed down to three possibilities, Wally Stewart, Al Crowder and Earl Whitehill, failed to strike any further fears into the camp of the New Yorkers, who have watched all three belted somewhat briskly at the Yankee stadium within the past two days.

SENATORS OFF.
The suspicion that the Washington hurling staff is either tired or for other reasons not exactly "on edge" has further strengthened the prospects for a close, hard-fought series. This development, plus the extraordinary faith placed in the ability of Carl Hubbell to outpitch the Senators into submission in the opening game or at any other time he pitches, has boosted the home team's spirits.

The Senators, 8 to 5 favorites for the past week, probably will be no better than 6 to 5 when the series starts. Hubbell is a 5-to-4 favorite to pitch the Giants to victory in the opener at the Polo Grounds Tuesday afternoon regardless of Washington's first pitching selection.

It was still wide open guess as to whether Cronin and his boss, Clark Griffith, will start Crowder Tuesday or rely on one of the two Senator lefties, Stewart or Whitehill.

"Your guess might be just as good as mine," said Cronin, after admitting Monte Weaver, the young right-hander, had been eliminated from first-game consideration.

If the Senator stars work in the order they were used against the Yankees, it will be Stewart, Crowder and Whitehill. But the lobbyists were strongly inclined to pick Whitehill.

TAKE IT EASY.
"Don't be misled by the way our pitchers have been treated here by the Yankees," continued Cronin. "They were sent out to pitch in the series, not to pitch their heads or arms off in a game that didn't mean anything."

The Giants have had their minds made up about their pitching staff for so long that the experts were beginning to worry about it today for want of something else to do in the tedious interval waiting for the series to begin. It will be Hubbell, Schumacher, Fitzsimmons and Hubbell, so far as Bill Terry is concerned, and the boys can go to sleep on that.

"Suppose Terry crossed you up and didn't start Hubbell?" some one asked Cronin, during a fanning session.

"Why, we would probably be so surprised we would go out and get eight runs in the first inning," laughed the young Washington manager.

Meanwhile, the official reports of a "good advance sale" of the 40,000 seats available at the Polo Grounds for the first two games.

The Giants' leaders to follow the lead of the Senators in obtaining Commissioner Landis' approval to sell single-game reserved seats instead of restricting the sale to the customary three-game basis.

SEAT SALE.
Half of the seats in the Polo Grounds will be unsold and on public sale on the day of each game. There were 20,000 seats in the upper deck of the big horse-shoe grandstand at $3.50 and 5,000 in the bleachers at $1.10.

The Senators' park a peak capacity of around 28,000 at Clark Griffith stadium, are more hopeful of a sell-out for the three games scheduled in the capital Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

KENTUCKY WINS OPENER, 7 TO 0
LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 30.—(AP)—A spectacular 7-3rd round return of a punt by Pug Bach, Wildcat halfback, in the final period gave the University of Kentucky a hard-earned 7-0 victory over Sewanee at Atlanta Park Saturday.

Bach's burst of brilliance was the only bright spot in the entire game, which, at the half, looked like a toss-up with both eleven playing rather raggedly.

Behind perfect interference, Bach eluded one tackler after another, cut across the entire field and tore down the right side line and toward the Sewanee goal. Ralph Kercheval place-kicked the extra point.

Amateur Games
HILLS PARK WINS.
Hills Park Baptist, champions of the Sewanee league, called the championship Rock Springs Presbyterian, 6 to 4, in the final series game at Atlanta Park Saturday afternoon.

A tally that settled three runs in the eighth frame brought the winner from the hills, never to be headed, although the losers and the tying runs second and third in the final frame. Maher, fast-ball pitcher, was called to the relief of Edge and whiffed the batter for the final out.

Bob McQuage Uses 'Charm' on Kicks
SANFORD FIELD, ATHENS, Ga., Sept. 30.—Bob McQuage, who kicked the sensational 50-yard place-kick against Georgia here today, believes in a charm. It is a watch chain given him by his girl two years ago. Before trying for a kick, in practice or a game, he always tosses the charm on the ground near where he is to kick. And he has yet to miss one. Spectators, some of them at least, were a bit puzzled to see him toss something on the ground after the kick. After the game he admitted his belief in his charm.

Probable Giant Starters

These three moundmen may be the hurlers to start the first three World Series games for the Giants. Left to right: Al Schumacher, Carl Hubbell and Freddie Fitzsimmons. Indications are that Hubbell and Schumacher will start for the Giants in the first two games at the Polo Grounds, beginning Tuesday, and that Fitzsimmons will start the first game in Washington. ## COLORED TEAMS OPEN SEASON

Outstanding among football teams of the colored Southern intercollegiate conference this fall will be Morris Brown College, Tuskegee Institute, Morehouse College, Knoxville College, Clark University, Alabama Teachers' College and Fisk University. These schools form what is conceded by all its followers as the "Big Seven" among colored colleges.

It is evident that among the three major colleges in Atlanta, Morris Brown looms as the strongest, yet Clark University and Morehouse will present formidable teams. Morehouse College will be the dark horse of the conference. They have added to the coaching staff a newcomer to this section in John "Link" Williams, a graduate of Brown University. It is likely a new system of football will be installed and Morehouse again will be a feared aggregation.

Morris Brown University is pinning its hope on a veteran backfield and well-balanced forward wall. Two or three freshmen may have to come through before anything definite can be said.

Clark University, with Coach Aiken in charge, will, as usual, have a good line with two outstanding backfield stars behind it in Miller and Carl Ray. The latter, a southpaw punter, is expected to bear the brunt of the offense.

stadium and ran for the concrete seats. They made them. Safe at home.

The crowd begins to arrive. An estimate of about 5,000 would cover this one.

TALKING WITH TEARS IN THEIR EYES.
Emissaries sent to see Clipper Smith, the North Carolina coach, reported that he was talking with tears in his eyes. The Georgia coaches were about the same.

This game had them both by the ears, hoping for a break, before it was played. In the press box there were some scouts. Al Howard, backfield coach at North Carolina, the chief rival of N. C. State, reports North Carolina as hoping for a better team this year.

Rainey Cawthon, from Florida; Banks, of Tulane, and several others were here to get Georgia.

The teams came on. The Georgia freshman rose and there was a forest of waving red caps. The teams gathered in clumps for the final talk. I could see them clapping hands. The whistle called them out. The crowd roared, making the spine tingle, and the 1933 season in Georgia was on!

BOYS' HIGH PLAYS GORDON FRIDAY

Boys' High and Gordon Institute, two outstanding teams in the district-at-large of the Georgia High School Association, will head the parade of prep football games for the week. The new order calls for spinners and three demoted stars have been widely outplayed by their happy sophomore rivals.

Casey has become something of a driver. A few days ago, exasperated by the sluggish play of his veterans, he replaced five of them with sophomore.

Quarterback Harry Wells and Tom Narzo, a regular end last season, have apparently fought their way back into Casey's good graces but the other three demoted stars have been widely outplayed by their happy sophomore rivals.

Casey intends to use an offense that is unlike anything Harvard has ever attempted. Both his previous teams used a few simple plays, built around the departed Jack Crickard, that required perfect execution for success.

LOOKS TO NEW SYSTEM TO BRING SUCCESS

Eddie Casey Seeks To Get Crimson Out of Rut.

By Bill King.
Associated Press Sports Writer.
CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 30.—(AP)—New players for new plays seem to be the slogan of Eddie Casey as he makes his third try at developing a Harvard football team capable of beating Yale.

Two years ago when Casey took over the Crimson reins, his team came down to the Ell game undefeated. But Albion Booth made the most successful Harvard season in many years a total loss by booting a last-minute field goal for the only score. Last season three games, including the one with Yale, were lost.

This season Casey has 16 lettermen as a veteran nucleus, including five of last year's Bowl starters, and 19 other experienced hands in his carefully selected squad of 35.

With all this splendid material, Casey faced the football future with high hopes. But they are dying fast. The veteran material is slow rounding into shape and the others have been performing in such ragged fashion that the soft-spoken and genial Eddie has been forced to adopt the iron-fisted methods that the late P. D. Haughton used when he made Harvard a football power.

Casey has become something of a driver. A few days ago, exasperated by the sluggish play of his veterans, he replaced five of them with sophomore.

Quarterback Harry Wells and Tom Narzo, a regular end last season, have apparently fought their way back into Casey's good graces but the other three demoted stars have been widely outplayed by their happy sophomore rivals.

GOLF FACTS NOT THEORIES

By ALEX. J. MORRISON
Central Press Association

Golfers generally think that it really doesn't matter where the ball is placed on the teeing ground.

Well, it does make a big difference in this way.

When the ball is placed to the extreme right of the tee the player invariably tries to steer his shot from the right side of the fairway toward the middle.

This steering forces him to swing from the outside in.

Placing the ball on the left of the teeing ground obviously encourages the player to make the correct swing which gives the feeling of hitting from the inside out.

President To View Clemson Regiment

CLEMSON COLLEGE, S. C., Sept. 30.—(AP)—Clemson College authorities announced today the entire Cadets' regiment will be carried to Washington for the Clemson-George Washington football game October 13 and that the corps will be received by President Roosevelt.

Plans for the stay in the nation's capital include a dress parade in Pennsylvania avenue before General Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff, and the corps will be drawn up in military formation to be received by the president.

The Cadets will leave here October 11 and return October 15, and will be out of the city with a field kitchen.

BY JOHN L. COOLEY.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP)—

Stocks held steady to September 30, the third quarter with a smart closing rally today, although the late trading prices had declined. Short selling earlier this week, however, appeared to have given the market a backlog of potential support and presumably it was covering by recent sellers that in large measure accounted for the final upswing. Grains ended the day virtually unchanged, while cotton here was a shade higher.

Several leading shares bogged down noticeably as the market rounded out its first hour. United States Steel, American Telephone and Electric, and General Motors were among the leaders. The market was a shade higher.

Metal Shares Advance.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP)—

Metal shares received a high polish from speculative buying. Domestic iron and steel shares were among the leaders. The market was a shade higher.

Decline in Month.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP)—

Stocks declined during September, thus moving counter to the trend which had been anticipated by those who were looking for post-Labor Day demonstrations of bullishness. The Standard Statistics Association's composite last just 10 points, ending the month at 78.1 compared with the July peak of 96.9.

Dollars Exchange Eased.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP)—

The dollar's exchange rate was eased, but the changes were hardly of sufficient size to be significant. The currency, as measured by the French franc, lost around 5 1/2 cents during September on the basis of today's closing quotation, which represented a gold value of 65.22, up from 65.17 a month it receded to nearly 65.2 cents, then rallied as prospects for currency inflation dimmed.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP)—

Following a quiet week, lead demand sharply late in the week to the highest levels. The market was a shade higher.

Antimony was Dull.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP)—

Antimony was dull, with prices nominal in absence of buying interest. The steel market was chiefly influenced by news of rail buying orders through government aid. Although actual import production was estimated to have declined 2 points to 41 per cent of capacity, more active specifications on bars, plates and shapes were reported prior to today's advance of $2 to $3 per ton. Pig iron was quiet with a moderate demand.

Cuba...

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP)—

Visitors to Cuba whether on business or pleasure, will find the new Havana office of this firm equipped to render a full service in securities and commodities.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Dull and irregular prices today marked trading in bonds movement as uncertainty continued to surround the government's future financial program.

Most followers of fixed securities generally maintained a fairly even tone. Some of the rails exhibited uneasiness. Carrier liens off fractionally to a point or more included some of Allegheny Corporation, Baltimore &amp; Ohio, Boston &amp; Maine, Erie Southern Pacific, Southern, Iron Mountain and Wash. Loans of Wash. Chesapeake Corporation and St. Paul railroad.

Minor gains were recorded by bonds of Atlantic Refining, Bethlehem Steel, Texas Corporation, Standard Oil of New York and others. United States Rubber 5s gained 2-3 points. Issues of Consolidated Gas, Postal Telegraph, International Telephone, St. Joseph Lead and Warner Bros. eased. There was little activity in the foreign section. Some obligations of Argentina, Dutch East Indies, France, Italy and Switzerland improved. Cuban government 5 1/2s lost 1-2 points following reports of further unsettled conditions in the republic. The Australian 5 1/2s were a bit more and the Germans were a bit lower.

United States government maturities were mixed. 3 1/2s and 4 1/2s first 4 1/2s were slightly firmer, but most of the treasuries sagged a trifle.

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Despite a brisk trade rally following material setbacks earlier in the month, grain trading today proved to be virtually a draw. Wheat closed nervous, 1-3c lower to 3-5c higher compared with yesterday's finish, corn and oats both unchanged to 25 cents down. Corn and oats took their cue chiefly from the course of wheat prices. Frost predicted for the Dakotas and Minnesota and for parts of Iowa and Nebraska had little market influence. Provisions were responsive to downturns of hog values to the lowest level in a month.

YOU OPPORTUNITY

The road is open again. A new day dawns. The NRA is going over the top. The wheels of progress have started turning. Preparatory plans are now in effect. Prices are being stabilized. Purchasing power has been increased. Unemployment has diminished. And the month of October is the first month in which the New Deal has a chance to really show what can be done. It takes time for any plan to be perfected, for the wrinkles to be ironed out. These difficulties are now being eradicated. Obstacles in the path of this gigantic undertaking are being surmounted. And now comes the day we have been waiting for. October will truly be a month of opportunity, for it will give each and every person, every merchant, every wholesaler and every manufacturer an opportunity to share in the return of prosperity.

Atlanta merchants were wise in buying before prices advanced. Replacement prices in most every line will be much higher. Prices on reorders from manufacturers and wholesalers now are much higher than they were 30 days ago. You will never again have such golden opportunities to "profit by purchasing" as you will have during the 31 days in October.

Sixth Week's Prize Winners in Ad-Writing Contest

Cash Prize Ad-Writing Contest

By JAY ORR JR.

And how the ads came in this week! And what a job the judges had! But after careful scrutiny of each and every ad and elimination, the three advertisements shown on this page were selected.

The first prize winning ad is perhaps the best ad which has been sent in to date. It will rate about 95 per cent.

The second prize winning ad runs a very close second and has everything that a good furniture ad should have.

The third prize winning ad was another of the excellent efforts and shows for itself.

There were many other advertisements which were entered and even the second choice ads were exceptionally good. Look at these ads and study them and see if you can not be one of the prize winners next week. Don't forget you can write as many ads as you wish. You may write 20 ads for one firm or 10 ads for all firms. The more you write the better chance you have to win. You can't win unless you try.

There remain 7 more weeks in which you may compete. Start tomorrow and get your official paper, you have just as good a chance as anyone. Now remember, contestants, that no matter how your ad looks in handwriting that when it is set up in type it will look just like the prize winning ads.

You can write as good an ad as anyone. All you need to do is try. Go to any of the stores co-operating in the Ad-Writing Contest and they will give you ad-writing paper absolutely free. Write your ad and enter it in the contest next Wednesday at 137 Peachtree Arcade. If there is any information you wish, you can obtain same by calling at Ad-Writing Headquarters, where an expert ad man will consult with you.

Don't let these 21 prizes get away from you. There will be $75 in cash prizes awarded each week for 7 more weeks, so you have lots of time in which to become proficient.

Alice Brady Scores Again In 'Stage Mother' at Grand

How a mother's ambition for her daughter converted the mother into a predatory and coarse blackmailer, and the daughter into a helpless and unhappy girl, is told in "Stage Mother," the current film at Loew's Grand theater, which presents Alice Brady in the title role, Maureen O'Sullivan as her daughter, and Franchot Tone, Phillips Holmes and Ted Healey in the supporting cast.

"Stage Mother" was directed by Charles Brabin, who was responsible for such successes as "Washington Melodrama" and "The Secret of Madame Blanche." This film provides Alice Brady with her best opportunity since her return to films. Miss Brady began her career as a screen star of the silent era, then graduated to Broadway, where she became one of the outstanding actresses of the stage. A few months ago she returned to Hollywood to play a part in "When Ladies Meet." She was so successful that two other roles followed in quick succession—in "Broadway to Hollywood" and "Beauty for Sale." In each of these she added new laurels to her career, and now, in "Stage Mother," she plays a difficult role with unusual dexterity and success.

As Kitty Lorraine she has a role which might easily have been made entirely unympathetic. She is a mother who used her daughter's stage success to blackmail the girl's sweethearts out of large sums of money. Miss Brady manages to make this role alive and understandable, showing us the early experiences which drove the mother to adopt this attitude toward life. To Kitty Lorraine, success on the stage seems the biggest thing, the most desirable thing, in the world. Therefore, she sets out to provide success for her daughter. But Shirley doesn't want a stage career. It is only because she is hypnotized by her mother's dominating, overwhelming ambition that the girl sets out to have such a career, and she little realizes the part her mother plays in her success.

The short subject portion of the program includes a Mickey Mouse cartoon, an M-G-M special, "Rhapsody Brew," and the Metrotones.

Buckhead Opens Week With 'Midnight Club'

The picture for Monday and Tuesday at the Buckhead theater is "Midnight Club," featuring Clive Brook, George Raft, Alison Skipworth and Helen Vinson. This picture gets behind the glittering front of London's famous "Midnight Club" and portrays in startling fashion the drama and intrigue revolving around this world center.

On Wednesday the Buckhead presents one of the most "different" stories ever told on the screen in "Supernatural," with Carole Lombard and Randolph Scott. This is a story that seriously tackles the theme of the spirit after death, its plot centering around the possibility that the will and soul of a dead person can enter and control the actions of another living person. It is weird in theme, but utterly natural in its presentation and development.

The attraction for Thursday and Friday is that delicious comedy of married life, "Mamma Loves Papa," with Charles Buziga and Mary Boland. How the quiet Charley, through the ambition of his wife, Mary, becomes for a while a city official, with all sorts of intrigue around him, makes for rapid succession of hilarious laughter.

Saturday, "Under the Tonto Rim," a western of a different sort of plot and treatment, will be shown. Stuart Erwin is the central character, a bashful cowboy, the butt of all jokes until love transforms him into a fighting, tearful, rarin' buckaroo.

Carefully chosen short subjects are to be found as added attractions on all programs.

Principal Offerings of the Week on Atlanta Screens

Peruchi Play Piles Thrills On Laughter

All theatergoers who enjoy a continuous series of laughs, with plenty of first-class thrills to provide contrast, will find exactly the thing they like in "Out of the Night," the play to be given this week by the Peruchi Players at the Erlanger theater. This production is an ideal combination of mystery and comedy, with a fascinating love story woven skillfully throughout the three acts.

"Out of the Night" was first produced at the Lyric theater on Broadway, and was such a success that when the lease on that theater expired it was moved to the Liberty, across the street, where it continued for several more successful months.

It boasts a great variety of characters which gives the Peruchi players splendid opportunities for the exercise of their undoubted talents as real actors. There is, for instance, a mysterious Hindu who appears and disappears with uncanny ability at the most unexpected moments. Then there is a "hick" sheriff on the trail of a gang of bootleggers, a comedy detective, the two young lovers and many other characters. To say nothing of the eccentric millionaire who is discovered murdered, sitting in his big chair soon after the first act opens.

The action takes place in a hunting lodge in Maine, in mid-January with a wild snowstorm raging outside. Of course everyone in the cast is suspected, at one time or another, of committing the murder but the action is so fast that the audience never has time to figure things out until—another dead body topples out of a suddenly opened door and a startling surprise winds up the story at the end of the punch-filled third act.

Ed G. Robinson, Kay Francis Co-Starred at Paramount

In "I Loved a Woman," which began a week's engagement at the Paramount theater yesterday, First National studios have produced as fine a piece of entertainment as has been seen on the screen in many a day. But the picture is more than that. It has epochal sweep, dynamic force, an inspired performance by Edward G. Robinson, and the divine Kay Francis, and amazing romance.

The picture covers one of the most momentous periods in the development of the nation from the '90s down to the present, a period fraught with revolutionary changes in political, social and economic conditions.

While the story of the passionate clandestine love between the two principals, Edward G. Robinson and Kay Francis, is a story in itself; this love is made the motivating force in one of the most titanic struggles for commercial supremacy in American history. It depicts the scramble for contracts during the Spanish-American War and the prosecution by President Roosevelt of certain meat barons for the sale of "embalmed beef" to the American army.

Although the characters it presents are purely the creation of dramatic fiction, the career of John Hayden, packer, is so interwoven with the major events of the nation's history

'Golden Harvest' at Georgia Is Timely Story of Farming

There's a picture at the Georgia theater that just misses the super-special class through the fact that it is so new that none of the managers had the opportunity of really seeing the picture as the Georgia audiences saw it yesterday, that is, with "audience reaction." It is a Paramount picture titled "Golden Harvest," and in the cast are Richard Arlen, Chester Morris, Genevieve Tobin and the stuttering comedian Roscoe Ates, who has been absent from the screen for several months.

"Golden Harvest" is a timely production. The theme of the story is that has been shouted on the front pages of the press for several months. Farm strikes, milk wars, all this and many other interesting farm angles make up the splendid story of "Golden Harvest."

The real story of "Golden Harvest" tells of the struggle of the modern American farmer to combat the ruinous influences of the trading pit. It is pictured through the eyes of two brothers, both born on the farm. The elder becomes a wheat speculator, with his eye on a fortune, who drives down the price of wheat, unthinking of its effect on his brother. It is at this point that the story gets underway for a grand and glorious climax.

Added offerings on the Georgia program include another chapter of the serial, "Tarzan the Fearless," a Mickey McGuire comedy, an NKA featurette and Pathe Sound News.

Starting Wednesday the Georgia will offer "Wild Girl," starring Charles Farrell, Joan Bennett, Ralph Belamy and Eugene Pallette. The story hinges on the tempestuous romance between a madcap mountain girl and a Virginia youth who has traced his sister's betrayer to the California Sierras soon after the Civil War. Colorful episodes of the Bret Hartie tale, "Salome Jane's Kiss," from which the picture was taken, are all presented.

Claudette Colbert Is at Fox In Star Role of 'Torch Singer'

At the Fox theater this week patrons are offered two unusually fine pieces of entertainment. The screen feature, "Torch Singer," with Claudette Colbert in the title role, is undoubtedly one of the most successful productions of the season, while on the stage Manager Whitaker has secured the Big Bethel choir, the original "Heavenbound" group of colored songsters, who sing the best beloved of spirituals as only their race can sing them, at 3:15 and 9:15 every day.

To hear this group of Atlanta negroes sing the sacred songs of their own people is an experience never forgotten, once enjoyed. It is singing such as can be heard nowhere else in the world and singing that thousands of visitors to Atlanta have discussed in their homes, all over the world, as the most remarkable experience of their visit to the Dixie metropolis.

Claudette Colbert in "Torch Singer" reveals again her utter charm as a woman, but adds to that charm an ability as an actress surpassing anything she has done in the past and a singing voice that is a delightful surprise to her thousands of admirers. The picture was made from a story by Grace Perkins titled "Mike" when it ran as a serial in a popular magazine and it is a clever story of modern life along New York's Gay Neon Way.

The supporting cast is headed by Ricardo Cortez and includes David Manners, Lyda Roberti, Albert Conti and many other popular players. Baby LeRoy, the infant who was such a sensation in the Chevalier picture "Zelig," is again in a delightful role in this new film, while little Cora Sue Collins proves herself a clever little actress as an older child.

The story begins when Claudette, as a chorus girl, is released by the man she loves, is forced to go to a charity hospital for the birth of her child. Later poverty forces her to give up the baby that it may be adopted and properly fed and cared for.

Still later Claudette becomes a sensation as a night club singer and gains for herself the title of "worst woman on Broadway." By a peculiar series of events, she becomes, secretly, also the beloved "Aunt Sally," a nationwide radio bedtime hour for children and she conceives the idea that through the radio, she may find and regain her own lost child.

There is heart wrenching suspense in this part of the picture and, when the happy ending comes, reminding not only the mother and child, but the father as well, every audience leaves with a feeling of utter satisfaction and personal pleasure in the climax.

Miss Colbert sings three songs, two of the hot chs night club type and one lovely lullaby that she croons to tens of thousands of little listeners over the radio. They are "Give Me Liberty or Give Me Love," "It's a Long Night" and, the lullaby, "Don't Be a Cry-Baby."

In addition to this splendid feature attraction and the Big Bethel choir on the stage, the Fox this week has a short subject program that is headed by one of the cleverest of all screen cartoons, Popeye the Sailor in "I Yam What I Yam." There is also the latest newsreel release, a comedy and Jimmy Beers at the organ with another of his universally popular special organology arrangements.

Celebrity Series To Be Presented At the Capitol

On account of the necessary delay in completing arrangements for the use of the theater in which to present the Alkabeth celebrity series, the season ticket sale for this popular course of entertainment features has been postponed one week to begin on October 10.

It has been decided by the management to use the Capitol theater, instead of the Fox, for presenting these programs in order to give the patrons a more intimate and satisfactory contact with the speakers and artists. There will also be less chance of interruptions in using the Capitol in case Sunday movies are permitted, since the Capitol is dark and no immediate plans for opening it are in store.

The beautiful new Capitol theater, with its more than 2,000 choice seats available, will still permit of the popular prices announced for the "celebrity series," ranging from 30 cents to 50 cents per ticket if the season rate is secured.

One outstanding musical feature has been added to the Alkabeth series in Bohumir Kryl and his symphony band of 40 musicians, with a quartet of international soloists, including Anna Fitzu, famous operatic soprano; Marie Kryl, pianiste; Beatrice Griffith, harpiste, and Bohumir Kryl, cornetist. This number is scheduled to appear on November 26.

The other celebrities already booked include Marion Talley, Ben Bernie and his orchestra, Uday Shan-Kar and his company of Hindu dancers and musicians, Amelia Earhart, Dr. Glenn Frank, Maurice G. Hindus, Senator Huey Long, the Japan vs. China debate by Dr. No-Yong Park and Dr. Kinnouke Adachi, and Dr. S. Parkes Cadman.

Advance reservations may be made through the Alkabeth bureau in the Mortgage Guarantee building.

'Lady for a Day' in Third Week At Rialto for Record Run

Breaking all Atlanta screen records for continuous showing, "Lady for a Day," that delightful Columbia production, is now in its third week at the Rialto theater. No picture has run this long at any theater since the early days of the talkies when "The Jazz Singer" played for seven weeks at the old Metropolitan.

Crowds that have packed the Rialto to fullest capacity every night for the past two weeks made it imperative that the picture be kept over for a third week. Many who are anxious to enjoy its gorgeous humor and perfect human understanding have still to see it and other hundreds have asked for the opportunity to see it a second, third and in some instances, even a fourth time.

Frank Capra did a marvelous piece of directing when he made this picture from the story, "Madam Le Gimp," written by Damon Runyon. It is a story of the permanent habits of Broadway, the gamblers, the police, the crooks, the beggars, the peddlers and the panhandlers. It is a story that proves that behind every exterior there is warm human sympathy, if only some means can be

BUCKHEAD SYMPHONY CONCERT TODAY AT 3

The Buckhead Symphony orchestra, new organization formed to bring the best in music to the city this fall and winter, will make its initial appearance this (Sunday) afternoon at the Buckhead theater. Enrico Leide is the conductor and under his baton Atlantans are assured, by happy experiences of the past, of the most perfect possible renditions of all types of real music.

The program chosen for this afternoon's concert includes some of the most popular of the classics. Such great compositions as "Pomp and Circumstance" and Nutcracker suite are included.

Former Governor John M. Slaton will speak briefly, explaining the aims and purposes of the orchestra. A few many other leaders in both city and state life will be present.

The concert will begin at 3 o'clock this afternoon and will continue for about 90 minutes. There is plenty of convenient parking space at the Buckhead theater and it is probable that the house, one of the most comfortable suburban theaters in the Atlanta area, will be crowded to the doors for the concert.

It is planned to present the orchestra in popular programs every Sunday afternoon.

DeKalb Opens Week With "Hold Me Tight"

James Dunn and Sally Eilers are starred in Monday's and Tuesday's feature attraction at the DeKalb when they appear in "Hold Me Tight." It's a story of two youngsters in love, working in the same store, waiting for the raise that will let them get married, and quarreling as to whether they should wait. Frank McHugh and June Clyde constitute the main principals in the supporting cast.

Wednesday, "Trick for Trick" is offered with Ralph Morgan, Victor Jory and Sally Blane playing the principal roles in this melodrama of two magicians trying to outdo each other.

"Don't Bet on Love" is Thursday's attraction and presents Lew Ayres and Ginger Rogers at their best in a merry romance.

Lionel Barrymore, Alan Dinehart, Gloria Stuart, William Cagney, Eric Linden and Gregory Rafferty are the leading characters in "Sweepings," which is offered Friday. The tragedy of having too much money, and a business too large for your heirs to manage is the nucleus of this story.

Saturday, Ken Maynard finds himself "Between Fighting Men."

Many farmers in Victoria, Australia, are storing tractors and using horses.

Motor trucks of Genoa, Italy, are giving warm competition to railroads.

ERLANGER

Here are shown a few scenes from "Dinner at Eight," the sensational M-G-M talking picture which opens a road-show engagement at the Erlanger theater on Monday night, October 9. The picture is the greatest in all Hollywood, in the cast of this remarkable picture. Some of them are shown above. The scene at upper left shows Wallace Beery and Jean Harlow. At upper right are John Barrymore, Lee Tracy and Madge Evans. Lower left gives a glimpse of Billie Burke and Marie Dressler, while the group at lower right includes Louise Closser Hale, Jean Harlow, Wallace Beery, Edmund Lowe, Karen Morley and Billie Burke. Others in the cast, not shown above, include Lionel Barrymore, Jean Herscholt, Phillips Holmes, May Robson, Grant Mitchell, etc.

"Dinner at Eight," the acknowledged best event of the year insofar as the screen is concerned, will open its road-show engagement at the Erlanger theater one week from tomorrow, on Monday, October 9. This tremendous production, with a list of stars that reads like a roster of all the truly big names in Hollywood, will be elaborately presented under road show conditions, with performances every night at 8:45 and matinees at 2:45. There will be no Monday matinee, it being necessary to use the entire afternoon preparing the theater for the premiere that night, but the picture will be shown twice daily all week thereafter.

This is the southern premiere for "Dinner at Eight," which, after being one of the outstanding stage successes of last season, has now been made into a picture that surpasses everything done in the past by its producers, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

The cast, reading like a roster of the screen greats, includes Marie Dressler, John Barrymore, Wallace Beery, Jean Harlow, Lionel Barrymore, Lee Tracy, Edmund Lowe, Billie Burke, Madge Evans, Jean Herscholt, Karen Morley, Phillips Holmes, etc. It was directed by George Cukor and the screen play was written by Frances Marion and Herman J. Mankiewicz, from the Sam Harris stage hit by George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber.

It is the story of the intrigues, coincidences, plots and counter-plots of a group of characters invited to "Dinner at Eight," by a prominent society hostess. Business rivalries, domestic jealousies, illicit love affairs and stark tragedy enter the lives of the group invited and the audience is enthralled throughout at the brilliant plot and its attendant characterizations.

The few people who have been privileged to see it at advance showing are widely divided as to which of the many stars does the outstanding performance. Some say Jean Harlow and Wallace Beery, others John Barrymore, while, of course, many are convinced that none can compare with the universal favorite, Marie Dressler.

Never have so many stars appeared before in one production. It surpasses, on this count, both "Grand Hotel" and "Rasputin," earlier MGM productions which have held the previous records.

It is certain that the opening night audience, a week from Monday, will be as brilliant for Atlanta as the cast itself is brilliant for Hollywood.

found to scratch the hard outer surface.

The cast will always be remembered by their work in this production, no matter what other triumphs they score in future pictures, because they are, everyone of them, so perfectly suited to their roles.

May Robson, Warren William, Guy Kibbee, Ned Sparks, Jean Parker, Walter Connolly, Glenda Farrell, Barry Norton, Nan Pentleton are only a few of the long list who do such inspired work. And their inspiration was in the most perfect story yet written for the screen.

It is the story of "Apple Annie," the pitiful old Broadway mendicant, who is made a "lady for a day" with fine clothes, beautiful apartment and even a kind and thoughtful husband, just so that the bluff she has played for years with her own daughter may come true long enough for the girl to win her life's happiness.

How the attempt finally meets success provides a climax that has never been surpassed for "punch" in book, on stage or screen. It makes every audience laugh with delight in so far as the tears of sympathy that wet their eyes permit. It is a simple yarn, made classic by its very simplicity.

A new program of short subjects is offered this week, particularly for those who will see "Lady for a Day" after having already enjoyed it once or twice or three times.

BLANCHE CALLOWAY AND BAND TO PLAY

The rafters of the city auditorium will again reverberate to the music of Blanche Calloway and her Columbia Broadcasting System orchestra swing into action in their return Atlanta engagement tonight.

Beginning at 12:01 a. m. and continuing until 4 o'clock, Blanche will get off to a good start with "Growlin' Men," the theme song that drew the attention of big New York producers to the Calloway unit several years ago.

And then an added attraction for those who will be able to get in tonight will be Blanche doing some stepping on an eccentric dance which she chooses to call the "Ankleships."

This is Blanche's last appearance in the south after an extended tour of the southeastern states. She will return to Philadelphia this week, where she will open the Club Seville, her old CBS spot.

Palace To Present

"Sweepings" Two Days

Monday and Tuesday the Palace theater shows John Barrymore in "Sweepings." This production parades grandly through several decades of American history, starting with the fire that swept Chicago of 1871 and swelling from there through scores of elaborate settings to the present day.

Wednesday comes "Song of the Eagle," a panorama story of two decades of tempestuous American life as seen through the eyes of a family of brewery owners. Charles Bickford, Richard Arlen and Mary Brian are the stars.

"Adorable" plays Thursday and Friday, starring Janet Gaynor and Henry Garat. The plot is a whimsical one of the variety that has made Miss Gaynor America's most popular star. The "Adorable" waltz, "My Heart's Desire," and "My First Love to Last" are the three song hits. "Flaming Gold" is shown Saturday. The thrills are offered by Bill Boyd, Pat O'Brien and Mae Clarke.

Poncey Has Success

In "Me and My Gal"

"Me and My Gal" with Spencer Tracy and Joan Bennett, will be on the screen at the Ponce de Leon theater Monday and Tuesday. Spencer Tracy has the role of a hard-boiled cop who was softened by a pretty young blonde.

Wednesday Rod La Rocque, Barbara Stanwyck, William Boyd and Betty Bronson will be offered in "The Locked Door."

Evalyn Knapp and James Murray make a charming team in "Bachelor Mother" Thursday and Friday. A young merrymaking girl in trouble and the police said they would release him if his mother would come to court. He has no mother but his law went to the old ladies' home and adopted a "Bachelor Mother" in order to beat the law.

Saturday Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey will be in one of their funniest hits, "So This is Africa." This is the most entertaining picture this popular team has made.

attention Saturday to the fact that his organization is sparing no expense on their productions, despite the fact that they are still showing at the extremely low admission scale which was put in effect in mid-summer when the company first came to Atlanta, 19 weeks ago. Monday nights continue as special "Ladies Night," when two can secure seats for little more than the price of one on other nights. And the Wednesday and Saturday matinees, at prices so low that seats cannot be reserved, continue to draw large crowds every week. All night seats are reserved, and may be secured daily at the box office which opens at 10 a. m.

S. R. O. Ralph T. Jones

There can be little debate as to the most important news in the theater world, locally, at this time. It is "Dinner at Eight." Whenever a picture boasts in its cast Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery—and Jean Harlow—and John Barrymore—and Lionel Barrymore—and Madge Evans—and Billie Burke—and Jean Herscholt—and Karen Morley—and Edmund Lowe—and May Robson—and Phillips Holmes—and others too numerous to mention, it simply overshadows everything else.

Did that preceding paragraph say "whenever?" Should be "when." For never before has any production contained such a list of stars. Reads like the Burke's peerage of Hollywood.

"Dinner at Eight" will be roadshowed at the Erlanger theater, with its southern premiere scheduled for 8:45 p. m., on Monday week. Thereafter it will be presented twice daily, at 2:45 and 8:45. We'll all be there.

Another big piece of news for screen fans—and aren't we all!—this week. "I'm No Angel," the new Mae West picture, is finally definitely set for showing at the Fox week beginning Friday, October 13. With a midnight preview on Sunday, the 8th. This is one picture, believe me, everybody will see and, by the same token, everybody will enjoy. Because Atlanta, the entire state and nation and world, has "gone Western" with a resounding bang, ever since Diamond Lil did her Lady Lou glide across the screen in "She Done Him Wrong."

This week the Peruchi Players give us a combination mystery drama and comedy in "Out of the Night," whose spookiness and fun run a close race for first honors. The following week, while the Erlanger is occupied showing us "Dinner at Eight," the popular stock company will be in Macon, showing the central city folks just what splendid stage entertainment we of Atlanta enjoy. It is rumored, though not definite, that the company will have one or two new faces in its personnel when it returns to Atlanta.

Nothing more delightfully surprising has happened in Atlanta for a long, long time than the continued success of "Lady for a Day," at the Rialto. That picture is now in its third week, yet night after night, the theater is so crowded you have to wait in the lobby for a seat. There is hope for the general public when they demonstrate their selective ability and good taste by voting so close to unanimously for such a picture as this. There is SOMETHING, some quality of tender sympathy and beauty about "Lady for a Day," that makes it the most appealing picture to people of every class ever made. The simplest, gentlest old ladies see it and leave raving over the story of "Apple Annie," and the toughest eggs in town are just as delighted, only they probably talk about Guy Kibbee and his six-ball pool shot.

Didn't get 'round to preview "I Loved a Woman," showing this week at the Paramount. My spies, who saw it pre-viewed, however, report it is a real picture, with Ed G. Robinson and Kay Francis both fully up to their highest standards. Story covering four decades in American history which performs, rather dilutes the action and characterization, but offsets this by its historic and sage-like qualities. Undoubtedly worth anyone's time and money.

Don't miss the Buckhead Symphony orchestra, which appears in its first public concert at the Buckhead theater this afternoon at 3 o'clock. Prices are such as to bring the finest in music within reach of everyone—1 understand top price is a quarter—and with Enrico Leide conducting and more than two dozen of Atlanta's finest musicians in the orchestra, there will be four or eight times that much entertainment in the program offered. These concerts are to be regular Sunday afternoon affairs from now on and there isn't a doubt that the 1,100 seats boasted by the Buckhead will be all required to accommodate the crowds. For Atlanta is hungry for real music and, also, hungry for something worth while to do on Sunday afternoons.

Diary of a Pre-Viewer.

WEDNESDAY—"My Weakness." Seen at the Fox. That quaint little star of "Congress Dances," Lillian Harvey, with Lew Ayres, Charles Butterworth, Harry Langdon and a grand group of pretty girls in support. Some strikingly original ideas new to the screen are worked into this one. Frinstance, what do you think of Harry Langdon as Cupid? A cupid who flits around every now and then and explains how the love story is going in confidential asides to the audience. Then there is a snappy song that recurs every now and then—"Gather Lip Rouge While You May." Sung by Lillian Harvey. And Charles Butterworth is at his best. What more can be said in the way of laughter? The plot—oh, a slightly different version of the Cinderella theme, not to be taken too seriously, but charmingly vital. And the sequence, where the china ornaments—dogs and dolls, cats and kewpies, Greek goddesses and satyrs, even a Rcdin "Thinker"—join in the song, is more than worth the price of admission alone.

We also previewed a new cartoon of Popeye, the Sailor, called "I Yam What I Yam." Excruciatingly funny, typical Popeyeisms—a cartoon strip transferred to the screen with happy retention of the original ideas.

THURSDAY—At Loew's Grand to see "The Emperor Jones." The world-famous Eugene O'Neill play, about an American negro, a Pullman porter, who became absolute monarch of a savage tribe and who, later, is driven to his death in the bush by the maddening beat of the drums of the medicine men. Played with an all-colored cast, except for the white trader on the island and a few minor roles in America. With Paul Robeson, famous negro baritone and actor, who created the central character of Brutus Jones on the stage, giving a performance that should make him a formidable contender for the academy award for the finest individual piece of work in 1933. No more than when white gangsters, crooks and cowards are shown in characters on stage and screen, does it mean that the white race is composed exclusively of gangsters, crooks and cowards. The opening sequence, where the African witchdoctor dance merges into the colored Baptist revival, is particularly clever.

Mrs. Miller To Illustrate Lectures On Decoration With Miniature Rooms

Druid Hills Garden Club will sponsor a series of lectures on interior decoration by Mrs. Mary Miller, Atlanta decorator, the first lecture being scheduled for Tuesday, October 3. The lectures will be given in the ballroom of the Biltmore hotel and will follow each successive Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock throughout October.

In planning the group of miniature rooms to illustrate this lecture series Mrs. Miller used the same wall elevations and floor space showing what might be done in one room, using the four periods as inspiration for its decoration. The first lecture deals with the furniture design of the last half of the eighteenth century. This tiny model has been designed and executed with infinite care. The general tone of its coloring is a faint salmon pink with deep cream tones in the floor covering and satin draperies. The fireplace is marbled in a deeper tone than the walls. Over the mantel is a portrait, life-sized, after Romney that acted as inspiration for the colors in the room. There is an exquisite crystal chandelier and neoclassic rug in Aubusson design.

The second lecture deals with the early nineteenth century, directoire, France, regency in England, Biedermeier in Germany and the classic revival in America sometimes called the federal era. The room typifying this important phase of much of the present-day design has white walls, with green marbled columns topped with gold lyres. The mirror over the fireplace is paneled against the wall with tiny gold stars. The rug is white and the fireside sofa is white with green trimmings.

The third in this series takes up a much-maligned period which is of great interest in the south since so many of the Victorian pieces of grandmother's era are still in many homes. Mrs. Miller started this room with the carpet. It is neoclassic and was especially designed for the room. The walls are maroon, the ceiling white with a massive crystal chandelier. Two portraits in ornate gold frames hang on either side of the fireplace. Most of the furniture has been painted white picked out with gold. The tufted upholstered pieces are in red satin with white trim.

The charm of the contemporary room lies in its simplicity. The mirror murals are its chief decoration. For the last lecture there will be a garden in the same miniature scale. All of these fascinating small articles have been designed and made by Mrs. Miller and John R. Bond.

Griffin Weddings Are Announced

GRIFFIN, Ga., Sept. 30.—The marriage of Mrs. Mary C. Newton and LeRoy Moore, of Griffin, took place here Wednesday afternoon, and Judge S. B. Wallace, ordinary of Spalding county, performed the ceremony in the presence of a few relatives and friends.

The charming bride was gowning in an ensemble of Copenhagen blue wool crepe worn with matching accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Moore left immediately after the ceremony for a trip to north Georgia and South Carolina. Upon their return, they will reside at Mr. Moore's large farm in Akin district.

Mrs. Moore is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Henry Chestnut, of Nixonsville, S. C. Her mother was formerly Miss Sara Versen. She is an attractive woman of distinct charm and is extremely popular. Mr. Moore is the son of W. M. Moore and the late Dora Justice Moore, of Akin district. He is a prominent farmer with a wide circle of friends throughout Georgia.

Miss Edith Stringer, of Griffin, and L. H. Blackburn, of Atlanta, were married in Griffin Tuesday at noon at the home of the Rev. Dr. Fred L. Glissen, pastor of the First Methodist church, and Mrs. Glissen. A few friends witnessed the ceremony, read by Mr. Glissen.

The bride's sheer crepe costume was of navy blue and was trimmed with touches of white. She wore a navy blue felt hat and other accessories to match. Mr. and Mrs. Blackburn left for Atlanta, where they will establish residence.

Duo of Debs To Make Bows On November 2

Probably the first of the season's debutantes to make their formal bows to Atlanta society will be Miss Suzanne Memminger and Miss Betty Gage, who will be presented at the tea-dance to be given by their parents, Major Philip Gage, U. S. A., and Mrs. Gage, and Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Memminger. Thursday, November 2, is the date chosen for this affair, which will be given at the Piedmont Driving Club. Guests will include the parents of the debutantes and a group of friends of the honor guests in the unmarried contingent.

Numbers of parties will be given during the debut season to compliment these popular young belles and will be announced later. Miss Memminger, the attractive youngest daughter of her parents, is a graduate of Washington Seminary, where she was a member of the O. B. X. Club and was outstanding in school activities. ## Wedding Date Is Significant.

Sentimental significance is attached to the choosing of October 16 by Miss Frances Howard as the date for her marriage to Joseph DuPuis McLamb. Not only does this date celebrate the birthday anniversary of the bride-elect, but it also observes the birthday of her very devoted great-aunt, Miss Frances O'Hear, of Charleston, S. C., for whom Miss Howard is named. She will be among the important out-of-town guests attending the wedding, to be solemnized at St. Luke's Episcopal church.

The lives of this Atlanta belle and her great-aunt have been closely linked on account of the latter being named godmother for Miss Howard at her christening and having also assumed this role at the christening of the bride-elect's mother, Mrs. Chesley B. Howard, who is the former Miss Margaret O'Hear.

A few years ago, when the former Miss Virginia Howard, sister of the prospective bride, plighted her troth to Julian N. Barrett, she, too, selected her birthday date for this auspicious occasion. Mrs. Barrett will be her sister's only attendant in the wedding, scheduled for October 16, in which Atlanta society is intensely interested.

Sunken Garden Features Decorations.

Miss Eloise Boylston, who is prominently connected with the art department of the public schools of Georgia, was honored at an exquisitely appointed dinner, given during her recent visit to Battle Creek, Mich., by Mrs. George McDonald, of Wyoming, Ohio. It was quite natural that the hostess, whose innate love for gardening made her chairman of the conservation division of the Garden Club of Ohio, should choose a garden scene for her decorations.

Guests walked under a bower of oak branches to approach the private dining room. The table was arranged in a hollow square and centered with a sunken garden, complete with its miniature trees, garden furniture, pool, stream, and rustic bridge. Miss Boylston is a writer of children's stories as well as a noted contributor to several art magazines.

Miss Marian Hillyer Wolff To Become Bride Of John M. Young, of New York City, in Fall

Photograph by Bascom Biggers.

MISS MARIAN HILLYER WOLFF.

No bride of the season will be lovelier than Miss Marian Hillyer Wolff, who will wed John Maurice Young, of New York city, at an early fall ceremony. The engagement of this couple, announced today by the bride-elect's mother, Mrs. Bernard Wolff, occasions unusual interest because of the decided popularity of the couple.

Noted for her beauty and charming manner, Miss Wolff holds the admiration and esteem of her contemporaries, as has been attested by the honors and distinction shown her in school and since her graduation. She has been among the sought-after belles at college and club dances throughout the south and in the east, her photograph often adorning the beauty sections of college year books.

Miss Wolff is a graduate of Washington Seminary, where she was a member of the Pi Pi sorority, the Senior Round Table, and the Bulldog Club. She received her A. B. degree from Hollins College in Virginia, where she was a member of the Chi Omega national fraternity. She made her formal debut with the Debutante Club of 1929-30. She is a member of the Atlanta Junior League and the Girls' Cotillion Club.

The bride-elect's father was the late Dr. Bernard Wolff, son of Eliza Preston Benton McDowell Wolff and Major Bernard Wolff, of Virginia, and grandson of Governor James McDowell, of Virginia. Through her father she is a direct descendant of General William Campbell and Elizabeth Henry, sister of Patrick Henry and noted member of the Carrington, Breckenridge and Preston families of Virginia and Kentucky.

Miss Wolff's mother was the former Marian Jean Hillyer, daughter of Ellen Cooley Hillyer and Judge George Hillyer. On her maternal side she is descended from George Walton, signer of the Declaration of Independence, and George Watkins, who compiled the first digest of the laws of Georgia. The bride-to-be is a sister of Miss Ellen McDowell Wolff and Bernard Preston Wolff. She is a niece of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred C. Newell, Mrs. James D. Cromer, Mrs. George Hillyer and the late Mr. Hillyer, Mrs. Arthur Krug, of Sao Paulo, Brazil.

Mr. Young is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John McLain Young, of Washington, D. C. His only sister is Mrs. Donald T. Babcock, of Los Angeles, Cal. On both sides of his family he is a representative of families prominent in social and civic affairs.

The future bridegroom is a graduate of Virginia Military Institute in the class of 1922 and afterwards graduated from the graduate school of business administration of Harvard University in the class of 1924. Since graduating from the Harvard business school he has been associated with J. P. Morgan & Co., in New York city, where he and his bride will reside following their marriage.

Bridal Bouquet Is Preserved.

Mauve-throated orchids and fragrant valley lilies, which formed the exquisite bouquet carried by Mrs. Lyman Sherwood Johnson, the former Miss Gertrude Proctor Askew, when she tread the orange-blossom trail at a picturesque "at fresco" ceremony solemnized at her home on Peachtree road, have been carefully preserved. Pressed under glass and mounted on a gold tray the blossoms will adorn the home of the bride and bridegroom. When guests, assembling at their attractive residence out Peachtree way are served from the tray, the tinted flowers will suggest the impressive September ceremony.

Blue and gold were the color tones chosen by the fair bride for her wedding, and the attractive bevy of bridesmaids were attired in velvet gowns shading from the most delicate of blues to deep midnight. Their flowers were yellow roses. As they formed a semi-circle to await the entrance of the bride the gray clouds which had gathered overhead parted to reveal the heavenly blue of the late afternoon sky. Long

AS OPPOSITE in personality as they are in coloring, Misses Florence Bryan, at the left, and Mary Bryan, daughters of Judge and Mrs. Shepherd Bryan, are equally attractive and are decided additions to any gathering. Fortunate indeed is the newly wedded couple, for an exquisite array of gifts will adorn their new home, which is located quite near the home of Mrs. Johnson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scott Askew. Handsome silver in the Maryland rose pattern will grace the hospitable dinner table when Mrs. Johnson presides with a new-found dignity in her role of hostess. An especially lovely gift was the silver water pitcher, simple in design, with a matching set of silver goblets. Fragile china and crystal, bits of choice tapestry and an array of gifts attest to the popularity of Mr. Johnson and his lovely bride.

Atlanta Women Figure In Augustan's Book.

Julia B. Moore, writing in the Augusta Herald, of Gertrude Capen Whitney's new book, "In the Fullness of Time," published simultaneously in England and America, and with the scene laid in Georgia, wrote interestingly of some of Mrs. Whitney's earlier work associated with a writer claimed by Atlanta.

"At this moment, when the passing of Roselle Mercer Montgomery is occupying our attention and filling our hearts with sorrow, it is interesting to report the part Roselle and her two devoted life-long friends, the former Ella and Ollie Evans, now Mrs. George Robert Argo and Mrs. Haralson Bleckley, of Atlanta, had in the making of Mrs. Whitney's book, 'The House of Landell,' as Mrs. Whitney herself tells it to the writer. Mrs. Whitney had written the New England part of 'The House of Landell,' with its conscience-piercing grueling, its stately dignity, when she came to visit her sister, Mrs. N. L. Willet, at the old Landrum home, in Augusta. This residence, noted then, but now in decay, with its large rooms of noble proportions and beautiful design, was at that time arranged for two families."

Miss Moore quoted Mrs. Whitney in telling how the young people frequenting the Evans home on the one side, helped her in the creation of her southern atmosphere and characters. She took often verbatim conversations and reproduced the delicate southern accent so delightful to her ear. She requested that this transcription be censored by the three friends, which was done, for she wanted to carry the life and charm of the southern speech. Mrs. Montgomery's home, on lower Greene street, was selected for the setting of the story in Augusta, because of its spacious piazzas, its grounds, large for the city, and its roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Ware Return in January.

Mr. and Mrs. Howell C. Erwin have received the glad news that Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ware will sail for home in January, and expect to arrive in Atlanta in January, 1934. It was almost three years ago that the former Miss Runa Erwin married Mr. Ware, and sailed for Melbourne, Australia, almost immediately thereafter. Every year since their departure in March, 1930, their relatives and friends have cherished hope that business orders would return them from their adopted country to the shores of their native land, and letters from Mrs. Ware to her parents reflected the same fond hope.

Mr. and Mrs. Ware made hosts of friends in Melbourne, and their presented to Atlanta society at a dance to be given by their parents at the Piedmont Driving Club Thursday evening, December 21. They will be honored at the tea-dance which will be given on Thanksgiving at the Driving Club by their brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Colquitt Carter Jr. In addition to participating in the whirl of life there has been fraught with many colorful phases. They have been extremely popular with the young married contingent in the Australian city where the most correct English is spoken. According to the former Miss Erwin, she has found it absolutely essential for one to speak the most grammatical English in Melbourne's exclusive circles. In addition to this accomplishment and other social graces, the former Miss Erwin is noted for her clever wit. This was distinctly demonstrated recently by a letter written by her to her former English teacher, Miss Annie Sharp, in which she thanked this beloved mentor of Washington Seminary faculty for those countless hours she had her remain after school to learn the ever-hated ENGLISH LESSON.

Announcement Recalls Amusing Incident.

Today's announcement of the engagement of Miss Mary Smith to Clifford Hendrix recalls an amusing, yet significant, incident which happened before the meeting of these two young people. When the Hendrix' home was built, on Piedmont road, there were scarcely any homes in the neighborhood. In fact, at that time that section was "far out." The Smiths' home, around the corner, was one of the very few houses in sight.

Young Mr. Hendrix, just beginning his high school career, was frankly disconsolate at the family's idea of moving to the country. His friends all lived in town and the move didn't please his fancy. One day, however, he consented to accompany the family to inspect the progress being made on the house. As they were leaving, two girls walked by. Mr. Hendrix, in a sudden interest in the "scenery," backed the car squarely into a tree that bordered the driveway. Nothing was said about the incident then, but later he confided to his mother ever so casually, that he guessed living way out wouldn't be so bad after all, that he might really come to like it!

Need we add, that one of those girls who passed was his future bride?

Atlanta Matrons To Christen Chantilly.

Congenial society matrons will motor to north Georgia on October 9, to visit Mrs. Malcolm Fleming, at Chantilly, her recently completed cottage, built on the shores of Lake Burton. Their visit to Mrs. Fleming will mark the christening of the house, which is furnished according to the artistic taste of its charming chateau. Its architecture is patterned after the first American homes built in the Blue Ridge mountains, and is put together with hand-hewn timbers.

The stones forming the old-fashioned fireplace are held together with mud, just exactly like the fireplaces were erected during the colonial era of Georgia. An iron crane and pot occupy the center and warming ovens are recessed in each side of the fireplace, which is filled with pine logs.

The house takes its fascinating name from Chantilly, the ancestral home of Mr. Fleming, in Vir-

stories told by old citizens. Mrs. Marye assisted her husband in assembling the data, after much research.

Betrothal Climaxes Brief Courtship.

Climaxing a brief and romantic courtship is the announcement made today of the betrothal of Miss Marian Wolff, one of Atlanta's most beautiful and popular belles, to John Maurice Young, a handsome young New Yorker. On a trip to New York last spring with Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Black Jr., of Atlanta, Miss Wolff was introduced to Mr. Young by Mr. Black, who had invited the New Yorker to dinner to meet the attractive southerner. The couple was immediately attracted and on a later trip to the east, during the summer, they again were together.

The latter part of the summer Miss Wolff spent, as the guest of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred C. Newell, at Highlands, N. C., where Mr. Young also spent his vacation, and the pair were constantly together. It was at this picturesque mountain resort that plans were made for the autumn wedding, and Mr. Young arrived in Atlanta yesterday by plane to be with his fiancée for the week-end of their announcement. After their marriage, at an early fall ceremony, and their subsequent wedding trip, the couple will reside in New York city.

Georgia's Red Hills Inspire Binding Color.

When the widely-anticipated "Garden History of Georgia" makes its appearance at an early date, it will be a nine-by-twelve-inch volume, bound in heavy red canvas. The Peachtree Garden Club, the organization sponsoring the publication, chose the color of the binding as nearly as possible to simulate the color of the famed red clay hills of Georgia. The book is printed in black walnut ink and contains some 460 pages of interesting information on the history and description of Georgia's plant life.

It was something of an event to the Garden Club members when the history went to press last week. They expect its debut not later than December 1, and it will be known as the bicentennial edition. Great credit goes to Mrs. Robert L. Cooney, president of the Peachtree Garden Club and chairman of the garden book committee of the Georgia bicentennial commission, and to Miss Hattie Rainwater, editor of the book and supervisor of nature study in the Atlanta public schools, for their untiring efforts in behalf of the venture. "Perhaps the outstanding feature of the volume is the collection of 25 drawings of famous Georgia gardens that are no longer in existence," said Mrs. Cooney. "The drawings are the splendid work of P. Thornton Marye, well-known architect, who has reconstructed the plans of the historic gardens from the meager details left of them and from the

Mrs. Sylvia Harshfield Gives Dinner-Dance.

Mrs. Sylvia Harshfield entertained at a dinner-dance Thursday evening at her home on Parkway drive. The spacious living room and music room was opened for dancing. Punch was served in the dining room, and the table was overlaid with a Cluny lace cover, and silver candlesticks held tapers. The lower floor was decorated with pink dahlia and rosebuds. Mrs. Harshfield was lovely in a gown of green chiffon, and was assisted in entertaining by Joe Staton.

The guests included Mrs. Hattie Fromson, mother of the hostess; Mr. and Mrs. Grover Nelson, Mrs. H. R. Long, Mrs. Allie Mae Dickson, Mr. and Mrs. Kelford Carver, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schmalback, Misses Eldora McEachern, Albertine Barries, Eva Collins, Susie Spinks, Frieda Garber, Leola Fowler, Thelma DeLoach, Dugan and Joe Staton, Frank Hodges, Hodges, S. C.; Burney Corcoran, Savannah, Ga.; Dr. Dave Abernathy, Grant Falls, N. C.; Dr. Stubbbs, Sanford, Fla.; Dr. James H. Kirby, Bill Jennings, Oscar Fields, Bill Wise and John S. Lacy.

bearing a tiny card, on which was written, "To Aunt Sara, with thanks, from Myra Boynton Brown."

Small Myra and her lovely mother, whose name she bears, have returned from the hospital to their home on Golf circle, where the most adorable nursery imaginable awaited this dimpled baby. Pink and blue are featured in the room and the be-ribboned bassinet, artistically draped in point d'esprit, is fitted with delicately-tinted pink sheets and pillow cases. Perhaps the most interesting bit of furniture in the room is the vanity dresser, which has a long mirror in the center and the sets of drawers at either side, painted delicate blue, belonged to Mrs. Brown and her sister, Miss Estelle Boynton, when they were babies. Another useful chest is that which was given the baby by Mrs. Claude McGinnis and was used by her children, Mary Lee and Claude McGinnis Jr.

Miss Sharp Plans Interesting Visits.

Lending variety to the whirl of good times Miss Lundy Sharp will have this fall, as a member of Atlanta's Debutante Club, will be the interesting visits she will enjoy to other southern cities, where she will be among admired belles present for particularly auspicious occasions. On October 12, this belle will go to Greenville, S. C., where she will visit her cousin, Mrs. Horace Swannell, and will be present for the colorful autumn Revelers' ball. Each year, among highlights of the social season in Greenville are the three balls given by the Revelers' Club, one in the fall, one at Christmas and a third in the spring. Miss Sharp has a number of friends in Greenville and was present for the Christmas Revelers' ball last year.

In December Miss Sharp will go to Savannah, where she will visit her intimate friend, Miss Mary Manning McNeill, a Savannah deb, and will be present for Miss McNeill's formal presentation at a brilliant ball to be given by her parents, Rev. and Mrs. Charles McNeill, on December 22. Miss McNeill, who has visited in Atlanta a number of times, will be among visitors present for Miss Sharp's debut supper-dance, which will be given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis D. Sharp, and her grandmother, Mrs. William Adkins, Friday evening, November 24, at the Piedmont Driving Club.

Baby Myra Brown Sends Flowers, Cards.

Few infants during the first week after their debut into this world are precocious enough to send sheafs of flowers with attached cards as did wee Myra Boynton Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Randolph Brown. The day after little Myra's birth, Miss Sara Law, a close friend of the baby's mother, was among her first visitors, bringing as a gift a handsome silver cup. Two days later Miss Law was rushed to another hospital for an appendix operation and that very week a gorgeous box of gladioli arrived

American Legion Auxiliary News Is of Interest

By MISS PEGGY HERRING,
Tifton, Ga., Publicity Chairman.

American Legion Auxiliary closed its membership books for its national convention, to be held in Chicago, October 2 to 5, with a national enrollment of 354,788 members. This figure is 86.69 per cent of the year's membership goal. The fact that more than 350,000 women have paid dues to the American Legion Auxiliary during this year of acute economic distress testifies eloquently to the value auxiliary members attach to the organization, and to their interest in the auxiliary's civic and patriotic work. Instead of losing strength during the depression, the Auxiliary has grown. The national enrollment in 1932, the last of the "boom" years, was approximately 330,000 members. While the 1933 membership figures show a decline from the peak enrollment of 1931 and 1932, auxiliary membership workers were gratified with the response to their efforts, and were optimistic regarding the possibilities for even larger enrollment next year. The auxiliary will begin enrolling its 1934 membership on October 20.

National membership trophies of the American Legion Auxiliary have been won this year by the departments of Tennessee, Panama, Illinois, and Wisconsin. It has been announced from the national headquarters in Indianapolis, Ind., following the close of the trophy contests. The big silver cups will be presented to the delegations from the winning departments at the national convention in Chicago, October 2 to 5. Tennessee has won the Hobart trophy, presented annually to the department of 1,000 or more members making the largest percentage of increase over its highest previous enrollment. Panama has won the Hobart junior trophy, awarded on the basis to departments of less than 1,000 members. The Wirtz trophy, for the department exceeding its membership quota by the largest percentage, and the Towns trophy, for the department re-enrolling the largest percentage of its membership by March 1, also have been won by Panama. Illinois won the Hoyal trophy and Wisconsin the Oliphant trophy.

Auxiliary unit of Tift county post, No. 21, American Legion, comprised Mrs. P. J. Dixon, of Thomasville, president of the Georgia department, and Mrs. J. O. Minton, of Thomasville, department secretary and treasurer, with a lovely musical tea at the home of Mrs. W. H. Hendricks at Tifton, Thursday afternoon, September 14. The presidents of the other women's organizations of the city were invited to meet the state officers. After a musical program, Mrs. Dixon addressed the assemblage in her usual charming way. Those in the receiving line with Mrs. Dixon and Mrs. Minton were Mrs. O. V. Barkuloo, Tift County Auxiliary unit president; Mrs. G. N. Herring, of Tifton, second district president, and Miss Peggy Herring, of Tifton, state publicity chairman. The officers of the Tift county unit are: President, Mrs. O. V. Barkuloo; first vice president, Mrs. A. B. Phillips; second vice president, Mrs. G. O. Wheeler; secretary, Mrs. C. W. King; treasurer, Mrs. A. R. Corry; historian, Mrs. G. N. Herring; chaplain, Mrs. B. A. Golden.

Officers of the Asa Warren Candler unit, American Legion Auxiliary, were recently installed by Mrs. John O. Owen, fifth district committeewoman. They are: President, Mrs. L. B. Whitehead; first vice president, Mrs. John F. Bass; second vice president, Mrs. J. D. Bledsoe; secretary, Mrs. James R. Green; treasurer, Mrs. J. R. Anglin; chaplain, Mrs. R. E. Leonard; sergeant-at-arms, Mrs. James Bly; historian, Mrs. Harry A. Ray; executive committee, Mesdames John O. Owen, E. E. Carter and W. R. Gilbert.

Ashburn unit met recently at the home of Mrs. Bert Miller at Ashburn, with the membership committee as hostesses. Members pledged loyal support to all projects, the first of which is work on the school grounds. Through the child welfare work clothes, books and tuition have been supplied for four children. The new officers installed are: President, Mrs. J. J. Story; vice president, Mrs. J. R. Lumsden; second vice president, Mrs. W. L. Humphries; secretary, Mrs. R. Buckner; treasurer, Mrs. Al Jones; historian, Mrs. H. A. Miller; parliamentarian, Mrs. Porter Hudson; chaplain, Mrs. E. F. Knowles; co-operation with post chairman, Mrs. R. W. Sumner; publicity, Mrs. E. C. Mann.

Atlanta Artist's Picture Wins Praise of New York Art Critics

By BESSIE S. STAFFORD.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Hutchinson, of Atlanta, has won fame in art circles of New York city, and a reproduction of one of her most notable paintings is published in today's grave pictorial section of The Constitution. The picture, "Young Girl in Blue," was exhibited in the July exhibition of the Midtown Galleries, and won the acclaim of metropolitan art critics.

Artist's Conception.

The picture reflects the artist's conception of a brooding girl in sharp blue, and is a figure composition of striking angularity of design, against the half-barrel chair with its gracious curve. The New York Times declared the portrait to be Miss Hutchinson's most mature and carefully wrought work to date.

The World-Telegram said: "Possibly the most outstanding canvas in the show is Mary Hutchinson's portrait of a young girl in blue, a handsomely composed and painted picture."

A reproduction of the painting appeared in the August issue of the Art Digest, the news magazine of art, which is combined with The Argus, of San Francisco. The New York Times published "Young Girl in Blue" in a Sunday issue in July, accompanied by flattering criticisms of the portrait.

Miss Hutchinson, accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Hutchinson, of Atlanta, is recognized as one of the most gifted young artists in the country. When she attended Washington Seminary and Agnes Scott College she made many pencil sketches of her schoolmates, which first demonstrated her talent in this direction.

At the age of 20, she was granted a scholarship to the Art Students League of New York-Salem, N. C., a nationally known portrait painter, to the National Academy of Design in New York city.

At the end of Miss Hutchinson's first year she won a medal in the antique class, and a similar scholarship was granted the second year. At the close of the second year she won another medal in the life class. At the end of the third year Miss Hutchinson won a $50 prize on her sculpture work.

Afterward, Miss Hutchinson began to break away from the merely academic training to express her own individuality, and in 1929, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Merrill Hutchinson, she went to Europe and made a three-month tour of Italy, Switzerland and southern France. The fund for this trip was earned by her portrait commissions.

Self-Portrait.

The picture of Miss Hutchinson accompanying this article is a self-portrait of the artist, which was painted several years ago by Miss Hutchinson. It hangs on the wall in the hallway of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hutchinson on Eleventh street, and is a splendid likeness of the lovely girl. She is a blonde with exquisite coloring and golden hair, and has expressive blue eyes and a mobile mouth.

Ever since 1929 Miss Hutchinson has been increasing her exhibitions in New York city, and during the past year numerous press notices appeared commending her work. Early in 1934 she will have a one-man show at the Midtown Galleries on Forty-sixth street, one of the most prominent art galleries in the metropolis.

In 1932 Miss Hutchinson had a one-man show at the High Museum of Art, which was largely attended. During the past summer she displayed four of her latest paintings in a group showing at the High Museum of Art. Last season one of her landscapes was purchased for a very well-known art collection in California. Miss Hutchinson's work merits the praise being accorded her by the leading art critics of the nation, and Atlantans feel a justifiable pride in her success.

Miss Edna Carter Weds Mr. Dobbins.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Wesley Carter announce the marriage of their daughter, Edna Alma Carter, to J. E. Dobbins, which took place on September 17.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. E. Crane, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, in the presence of a few close friends. The bride was attended by Mrs. Merrill Hutchinson, and the bridesmaids were white accessories and wore a corsage of sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley. She was attended by Mrs. Alice Allen. She is a graduate of Fulton High school and Crichton Business College.

The groom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Dobbins, of Alabama. He is a graduate of the Perry High school at Marion, Ala. Both the bride and bridegroom are well known among Atlanta's younger set. Mr. and Mrs. Carter are at home at 814 Woodland avenue, S. E.

Miss Duke Weds Seaborn T. Thames.

DOUGLAS, Ga., Sept. 30.—Mrs. M. P. Duke announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Mae Elizabeth Duke, to Seaborn Thaddeus Thames on September 17. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. G. Earnest, pastor of the Methodist church here, in the presence of relatives and friends.

The lovely young bride wore for the ceremony a sports suit in blue and gray wool, with hat and accessories to match. Her flowers were a cluster of Sweetheart roses.

Mrs. Thames graduated from Douglas High school and attended the South Georgia State College. Mr. Thames, who is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Thames Sr., of Jacksonville, Fla., attended the Andrew Jackson High school and is a graduate of the South Georgia State College at Douglas.

Mr. and Mrs. Thames left for Jacksonville, where they are at their home on 21 East Thirty-second street.

Mrs. Henry A. Inman's Death Saddens Host of Atlantans

Although the death of Mrs. Henry A. Inman was not unexpected because she had been seriously ill for two months, the news of her passing on Saturday at Southernland, her summer home at Southwest Harbor, Maine, brought sorrow to her Atlanta relatives and countless friends. Her husband, Henry A. Inman, and her only sister, Mrs. Helen Crew McCord, were at her bedside when the end came to her peaceful life. According to a wish expressed many times during her lifetime, Mrs. Inman will be buried on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the cemetery in Southwest Harbor, the town in which she had spent so many happy days of her life.

Mrs. Inman was the former Miss Roberta Southernland Crew, and was born in Atlanta on July 29, 1874, the daughter of the late Benjamin Baker Crew and Matilda Maffett Crew, highly esteemed and beloved pioneer citizens of Atlanta. She was educated at Mrs. Ballard's School for Girls, and married Mr. Inman on June 6, 1894. Her husband was born one son, Arthur Crew Inman.

Regarded as one of the most beautiful and gracious women in the social life of Atlanta, Mrs. Inman found ample time to give to her religious life, and was a leading member of the North Avenue Presbyterian church. She was admired for her exquisite refinement, sincerity of purpose, dauntless courage and kindly nature.

An avid reader, Mrs. Inman pursued only the best in literature, and her love of horticulture made her garden at Southwest Harbor one of the beauty spots of that section of Maine. Aside from her church affiliation, Mrs. Inman was a member of the Colonial Dames, Order of Old-Fashioned Women and Peachtree Garden Club.

She is survived by her husband, Henry A. ## MITZI the MODEL

— By James Montgomery Flagg —

Mitzi Tells How She Met Harry Lorber

Sunday, October 1, 1933

1. MITZI resumes her story of how she has spent her time since her arrival in New York. She tells Jack how she has been modeling for photographs of her hands for Bernie Lederer and how a prominent jeweler, who happened to be in the studio one day, lent her a gorgeous bracelet for one of the photos and then tried to get her to accept it. She squelched him with a frigid, "No, thank you."

2. "I HADN'T seen Harry Lorber since I left home and I was quite astonished to meet him at Bernie's and also greatly surprised to find I had been modeling for his firm's account," continued Mitzi. "He told me he had 'made good' and instantly proposed that we run out and get married. As usual he began to get domineering and to raise his voice and finally Bernie, who was standing nearby, had to threaten to throw him out bodily unless he quieted down."

3. "HE calmed down and was almost unbelievably humble. Then he begged me to give him my phone number, continually reiterating that he would be gentlemanly in the future. I, feeling foolishly sentimental about turning down an old home-town friend, gave it to him."

No Nice Girl Lies (Without a Good Purpose)

By Alice-Leone Moats

With Drawings by Richard A. Leoderer.

Miss Moats Recommends That It Is Much Kinder to Tell a White Lie Over the Telephone to One Boy-Friend When the Other Boy-Friend Is Present. No Nice Girl Says, "I Can't Go, Henry—You See Cuthbert's Here."

LOOKED at from a purely feminine angle, or even from a worldly one, lying is an art very well worth cultivating. Setting aside severe moral scruples and high-flown beliefs that virtue receives its reward one must admit that the truth seldom pays. Cast a casual glance at the characters in history who have attained fame and importance; the only one to whom you can immediately attach a legend of truthfulness is George Washington; the others reached the top because they recognized the necessity of diverting the truth to their own purposes. And the women who have established themselves in the Hall of Fame have scarcely done so without allowing their imaginations some leeway.

But descending to everyday life, there are times when wide-eyed honesty is definitely out of place—when it is not only unwise to tell the truth, but scarcely polite. As children we are taught not to lie by dutiful parents and teachers who drum it into us by whatever methods of discipline they go in for. Then, as soon as we have learned the lesson so thoroughly that we inform a lady who asks us if we love her, that we don't because she's old and ugly, parental wrath unexpectedly descends upon us with more than its usual force. It's all very puzzling, because no one has the honesty to explain that there are fine shadings of truth and that the amiable lie and the lie politic are social necessities. We only learn this by experience and waste a great deal of time that could have been put to good profit perfecting a useful accomplishment.

It's bad manners to break an engagement by saying "I can't come to dinner because there's something I'd rather do," but, in most cases, it's true. Delirious bread and butter letters written after a week-end filled with horrors, polite thanks after an extremely dull party, can scarcely be called anything but falsehoods and yet they are required by politeness. Flattery comes under the heading of the amiable lie; the cleverest and least susceptible respond to it, and it really is quite as easy to tell a friend that she's looking beautiful or that her hat is becoming as to tell her that she looks ill or that her hat makes her look like a fright. One mode of approach can become a habit as easily as another. In fact, you will notice that it's always the same person who, probably through some mistaken idea of showing a personal interest, invariably greets you with, "But darling, you look tired and overworked." It stands to reason that you could no more look worn all the time than you could appear radiantly beautiful every day.

However, it's probably preferable to be the frank, open type if you haven't the ability to differentiate between the necessary lie and the useless one. There are people who are congenitally untruthful, who invent just for the fun of it and lie about the most amazing trivialities with the result that they are eternally in the midst of unnecessary complications and since they already have an uncertain reputation for veracity, can't get away with a lie when they really need one. In these days amateurishness has no place, only the professional attitude commands respect; on that principle a useless lie is a stupid one. Involved stories about adventures you've never had, learned discussions of books you've never read and references to people you've never met, all come under that heading. If you can't sit still and look wise you will do well to admit quite frankly that you haven't the vaguest notion what or whom the conversation is about, rather than to be pushed into the endless difficulties that result from a pretense of knowledge. The person who goes in for that sort of thing is on a par with the one who makes a lavish and extravagant use of Christian names, with the idea of impressing listeners who have the sense to realize that it is not only impossible to know that many people quite that well but that no one would want to.

In most cases understatement of age can also be classed as a useless lie, considering how many of us look our ages. But it's a favorite with women; even the least vain indulge in it and probably will continue to do so as long as they keep their touching faith in cosmetics. If you go in for this, at least stick within a decade of your actual age. Your friends will be kind enough to allow a slight miscalculation to pass, but few of them will tolerate having their intelligences insulted by being asked to overlook 10 years, or to believe that child-marriage exists in America to the point that all mothers of sons or daughters of voting age are still in their early thirties.

When an acquaintance or friend advances upon you, accusing you of having said something unkind or having repeated a particularly unfortunate bit of gossip, fall back on the truth and admit that you did say whatever you said. This is one situation that a lie won't get you out of and the truth may prove unexpectedly disarming.

One of the wisest of the French proverbs is "Qui s'excuse s'accuse" and it bears out the theory that the truth can often be used for purposes of concealing as well as revealing. Evasiveness is too often a dead give-away that you have something to hide. The curious who think they can find out what they want to know by vague questions are invariably put off if you grow expansive. When a reference to some man generally suspected of having more than a platonic interest in you calls forth rhapsodies of enthusiastic praise, doubts will arise in the interrogator's mind that would never be put there if you looked vague and pretended to know the man in question very slightly.

However, when you come down to facts, for a woman, all lying is unimportant except in her contacts with men. (We mean that quite nicely.) There's no point to telling a man the truth, ever, about anything. You will be asked where you lunched and with whom, who sent you flowers, what you did the evening before, by men optimistic enough to believe that you will tell him the truth, but masculine enough to be disappointed when they hear it. If necessary, invent other beaux but never, under any circumstances, admit that you sat home like a good girl with your knitting, or that those flowers came out of your garden, for the suspicion of having a rival may bring on a jealous scene, but will cause no real displeasure.

The ability to tell a clever lie at the right moment is a desirable talent and one which has always been a woman's greatest strength. It probably will continue to be her strength, in spite of the single standard, woman suffrage and this equality of the sexes that we're supposed to grow so excited about. For a woman, lying has now been hallowed by custom; you are not expected to tell the truth to a man and you make a mistake if you do since only the very unusual male likes the unexpected. Beginning with a father and continuing with a husband or a lover you will find that they all enjoy the feeling of power it gives them to know that you are sufficiently in awe of them to prevaricate and it flatters them to think that you will take so much trouble to please. It's an easy way to please. So, the moral is, if you must tell the truth, do it in such a way that man thinks you are lying.

SHALL A GIRL TELL ALL?

When We Were Kiddies, Says Miss Moats, We Were Taught That It Was Naught to Tell a Lie and That Truthful Little Boys and Girls, Though They Did Little With Their Little Hatchets, Would Get the George Washington Reward. BUT—

What Happens? "I Don't Like You 'Cause You're Ugly!" Little Johnny Truthfully Screams at Mrs. Jones. Johnny Promptly Gets the Works From Mama and Learns That Not Even Nice Boys Should Tell the Truth Always. It May "Hurt."

NIGHT FLIGHT By ANTOYNE DE SAINT EXUPERY

HENRI RIVIERE glanced for a moment at the faraway heights of the mountains, jagged white against the afternoon sky, then turned back to the grave-faced, pompous men in his office.

"The night flight across the mountains is possible," he said quietly.

There were no immediate words from the group of men facing him, but a flurry of dissent seemed to pass through them. The stern lines of Riviere's face softened a trifle. He smiled, a smile that was behind his lips and not visible to these men. Their opposition to his plans? Puff! It was nothing. There had been so many more formidable obstacles. The physical things that he had had to beat down. The mechanical difficulties his engineers had overcome. The difficulties of personnel; the training of pilots, ground crews and mechanics that had been necessary before the first of the huge tri-motored planes had lifted its fat wheels from the concrete runway of the airport. These had been real difficulties. But a board of directors? Puff!

"It is a matter of progress, gentlemen," he told them. "I could not stop it now if I wanted to. The first plane has already left the coast and is flying here. The plane from west to east will leave tonight at 11 o'clock."

Daudet, president of the Amalgamated Airline, shook his head. "For what?" he questioned. "Just so that some postcards can get to Europe one day earlier?"

"No, it is a matter of life and death for us, for the lead we gain by day on ships and railways is lost each night."

Daudet rose. The board of directors rose with him.

"It is your responsibility," he said as he started for the door.

Riviere nodded. He did not have to be told it was his responsibility. It was his thought, the night flight, and he had done everything to make it possible. Hardly had the men left than he turned to his assistant, Robineau, who stood by his desk, dreamily scratching himself. Robineau, slavishly devoted to the stern Riviere, was afflicted with eczema. He was always clawing at himself.

"Robineau."

"Yes, sir?"

"What did the afternoon pilot say about the weather?"

"Excellent. Excellent. Not a cloud. Not a breeze of wind."

Riviere looked out of the window again. It was a perfect day.

But he frowned. The storms rose suddenly and, without warning about the chill peaks of the mountains, came sweeping up from the mountain meadows and across the bare rocks and snows of the glaciers to create drafts and suction in the passes and among the peaks.

The telephone on his desk jangled. He took it up. A sweet, gay voice came to him.

"M'sieu Riviere? This is Madame Fabian. When will my husband come home?"

"Promptly at 11 o'clock."

"I shall wait dinner for him."

He put down the receiver. The warmth and gladness of the woman's voice was in his ears. She was happy in the anticipation of reunion with her husband, the husband who even now was lifting his plane up from the steaming jungles and morasses of the east toward the mountain barrier and the coming darkness.

"Any report from Fabian?" he asked, turning again to Robineau. "Weather clear and the plane functioning perfectly."

At her home Madame Fabian, arranging the dinner table, ceased humming to tango with which she had accompanied her own blithe movement about the table and called into the kitchen.

"Josephine! Josephine!"

The servant girl made a guttural sound to indicate that she had heard her mistress and was ready to listen.

"Put the champagne on ice. We shall have champagne tonight when M'sieu gets home."

She began singing and then crossed to the radio and turned it on. A jazz orchestra's music came into the room, the reception clear and strong. Then suddenly the music faltered, crackled as static shook the air waves. Madame Fabian's face grew white.

That meant storm somewhere over the mountains. Storm and darkness and the high winds about the jagged peaks came into her mind's eye. She put this picture of tumult away from her and again began to sing. Fabian would miss the storms.

In the air, high above the pampas and the grazing herds of sheep, Fabian sat at the controls of his plane. The motors were turning over perfectly. The big plane was speeding forward without a hitch. They were ahead of schedule. He felt a tap at his shoulder, turned and took the slip of paper from his wireless operator.

"Storms of cyclonic force at

Medano. Shift course for Boca del Toro."

Fabian peered through his goggles at the gasoline gauge. There was more than enough to get him to Boca del Toro. He turned the plane northward and gave it more gas. They would have to make better time to keep up with their schedule if they refueled at Boca del Toro.

He had hardly set the new course than another tap at his shoulder, another message.

"Head due west. Storm at Boca del Toro. Wind pennant blown from hangar roof. Cannot land there."

He looked again at the gas gauge. He might make the home port. It was dark now. A gust of wind from the mountains shot the plane upward, then dropped it. The drop made his stomach go empty and tight. He controlled the plane. Then scribbled on the pad fastened to his knee and passed the message back to his operator.

"Wire Riviere for instructions." A moment later the note came back to him.

He nodded. Another gust of air shook the plane.

In his office Riviere paced back and forth, nervously. The weather reports were getting worse. Outside a gale was sweeping the landing field. Suddenly he rapped out an order to Robineau.

"Have the west-to-east plane made ready at once. If Fabian fails to come in, the other pilot must leave anyhow on schedule."

Robineau nodded, then handed his superior a wire. It was from Fabian.

"We have only five minutes' more gasoline."

Riviere frowned, sighed, then frowned again.

"Tell him to keep flying and to send us his direction."

In the east-to-west plane Fabian felt a tap at his shoulder. It was his operator. He took the note.

"We are over the sea."

He turned back and looked into the terrified face of his operator, looked and forced a smile, then bent forward and pulled the stick back. They began to climb. Up. Up. Finally they broke through the sea of clouds. Above them was the sky. Below them cloud banks and the sullen murmur of breakers. He pointed to the gas gauge. It was empty. He made the signal that they had agreed upon when it was time to abandon the ship, then tested the buckles of his parachute. The operator was busy at his instrument, sending a last message:

"Gas gone. Lost. We are above the sea. Abandoning the ship."

Into Riviere's office came a white-faced clerk bearing this message and behind him, pushing Robineau to one side as he tried to detain her, came Madame Fabian, her pretty face twisted with the agony of apprehension and uncertainty.

"Where is he? Where is he?" she shouted to Riviere.

He handed her the message. She broke into unrestrained sobbing.

"M'sieu Riviere," Robineau

whispered to his boss. "M'sieu Daudet is here."

Riviere laid a comforting hand upon Madame Fabian's shoulder before he started out of the room.

"We will do all we can to find him," he said, and closed his eyes to see better the mental picture of two parachutes floating useless upon the long, rolling swells of the ocean.

Daudet was waiting for Riviere. His face was scarlet with determination and anger.

"This wreck! How do you explain it? It defeats everything. I demand that you stop the European mail plane."

"The west-to-east plane?" Riviere questioned.

"Yes. I demand that you stop it."

Riviere scowled.

"There is no such thing as defeat," he said. "Except to weaklings. To the strong a catastrophe is only a lesson. It shows up the mistakes—how to avoid them—"

He broke off to nod to Robineau.

BARON TRECK.

TROUBLE HUNTER

Beneath his feet was a tombstone bearing his name and a death's head. . . . It is no wonder that thoughts of suicide almost overcame him at times.

By Alfred Sorenson

IF ever a man was entitled to be called "a son of misfortune" that man was Baron Frederick Treck, the story of whose life reads more like an exaggerated romance than a truthful narrative. He spent much of his life hunting for trouble—and he never failed to find it.

Baron Frederick Treck came of an ancient, noble and wealthy family of Prussia. He was born in 1726 in Konigsburg and was educated in the university of that city. An apt student, and an expert swordsman, while at the university he fought several duels, each time wounding his opponent.

Upon the invitation of an army officer young Treck presented himself to the king—Frederick the Great—at Potsdam in 1742. He made a most favorable impression upon His Majesty, who granted him permission to enlist as a cadet in his bodyguard, and at the same time promised him an early promotion. At the end of six weeks the king examined him in various subjects and the next day presented him with a cornet's commission.

He was next made an aide-de-camp as a reward for gallantry in the field. His future now seemed to be of the brightest hue, but a single misstep forever blasted his fortune.

The handsome and dashing officer secretly won the love of the king's sister, the Princess Amelia, whose affection for him endured throughout her life.

ONE day a lieutenant joked him about his clandestine amour. Feeling insulted, Treck drew his sword and fought a duel with the lieutenant, whom he wounded. On the following Sunday King Frederick, who no doubt was fully informed as to the love affair and the duel, was witnessing a parade, and as Treck passed by he said to him: "The thunder begins to roll and the bolt may fall."

The bolt fell a few days after this warning. Treck was arrested and confined in jail for a brief period, and upon his release he departed with the troops on a campaign in Silesia. Soon after his return another and heavier bolt fell.

He had been carrying on an innocent correspondence with his cousin, who was in the service of Austria. This correspondence with a member of the enemy's army was looked upon as savoring of treason. Treck was imprisoned by order of the king.

Emphatically denying that he ever had the remotest thought of betraying his country, he wrote to the king requesting a trial by court-martial but received no answer. His next step was to establish a correspondence with Princess Amelia.

Treck seized the officer's sword, sprang through the open door of his cell, wounded four guards, sprang over the ramparts.

She answered that she had perfect confidence in him, and she blamed the king for his precipitate anger and unjust suspicion; and she promised Treck speedy aid, at the same time presenting him with a thousand ducats. Treck spent this money freely, causing the officers to suspect that his funds came from his cousin.

AFTER an imprisonment of five months in the fortress of Glatz Treck was surprised by a proposal from an ensign that he attempt an escape. Plans were accordingly made, but another prisoner—a captain—who had been taken into the plot, informed the authorities and thus gained his own pardon. A few years later Treck met this traitor in Warsaw and in a duel shot him in the neck, killing him instantly.

Immediately following the discovery of his proposed break for liberty Treck's confinement became more severe as the king's anger had again been aroused and his suspicions had grown stronger. Treck now determined on either flight or death.

With his penknife he sawed through three iron window bars, and with a file, obtained from a friendly officer, severed the remaining eight bars. Cutting his leather portmanteau into strips, fastening them end to end, and adding his bed sheets, he made a rope by which he descended from his cell on a dark night and sank to his knees in the mud of the moat.

There he stuck fast. He was finally obliged to call a sentinel, and he was soon back in his cell again.

A week after this humiliating incident Treck asked an officer if he knew how long was his term of imprisonment.

"A traitor to his country," replied the officer, "who has corresponded with the enemy cannot be condemned for a certain time, but must depend for grace and pardon from the king."

ANGERED beyond control, Treck seized the officer's sword, sprang through the open door of his cell, wounded four guards, sprang over the ramparts, and leaped over a second wall. In a narrow passage he ran against a sentinel whom he wounded in the face.

Treck now made a spring at the palisades, but was caught by his foot and received a bayonet wound in his upper lip from one of his pursuers. Other soldiers fiercely beat him with their muskets and dragged him back to prison.

It was not long after his interrupted flight that he became involved in a plot with a number of soldiers, who were engaged in a conspiracy to desert and free all the prisoners in the fortress. When they made the break they failed in their attempt to release Treck.

Only twenty of the deserters got safely away. Treck refused to name the remaining conspirators and was prosecuted for conspiracy. The Princess Amelia, with whom he had kept up a correspondence, wrote to him, saying: "My tears flow with yours; the evil is without remedy. I dare no more. Escape if you can."

One day a lieutenant, named Bach, who was an expert swordsman and a quarrelsome fellow, boasted to Treck that he had wounded Lieutenant Schell in a duel. "I believe you would have some difficulty in wounding me," remarked Treck.

A few minutes later Bach brought two swords and said: "Now show me what you are able to do." Thereupon they went at each other, and Treck wounded his opponent in the arm. "You are my master," the lieutenant acknowledged, "and you must, and you shall, by my aid obtain your liberty as certain as my name is Bach."

He praised Treck for his swordsmanship and offered to sacrifice his life, if necessary, in his behalf. That evening he brought Lieutenant Schell to Treck's cell and said: "Here's your man!"

It was arranged that Schell was to desert with Treck when the latter should make his escape. When about to carry out their design Schell, laboring under great excitement, entered the cell of Treck and said: "We are betrayed. Follow me; only do not suffer me to fall into the hands of my enemies. We have not a moment to lose."

"I am taking this prisoner to the officers apartment, and you stand where you are," said Lieutenant Schell to a sentinel who permitted him to pass with Treck. A few steps farther on they met the adjutant and another officer.

Schell sprang upon the rampart and leaped from the wall, which was not very high, and injured his ankle. The next moment Treck was over the wall and at his side. Schell drew his sword and pleaded with his companion to kill him and fly.

INSTEAD of doing so Treck picked him up and hoisted him over the palisades, and then getting him on his back carried him on a run, not knowing whether he was going. The sun had just set and the ground was covered with frost.

Treck hurried on, with Schell on his back, and swam with him across the river Neiss, doubling back in a fisherman's boat, thus throwing the pursuers off the trail. Schell broke off the limb of a tree for a cane and hobbled along as best he could, with the aid of his companion. They soon found a safe retreat across the border in Bohemia.

In August, 1748, Treck entered the military service of Russia as captain of dragoons.

In Moscow he became very popular and took advantage of several opportunities to win the affections of prominent ladies.

One was a young princess, who although compelled to marry a wealthy old statesman, remained the "true love" of the gallant Treck, to whom she lavishly presented money and jewelry.

In 1754 his mother died in Prussia and he obtained permission to visit Danzig to settle some family affairs. When he got there, however, the authorities, at the demand of the king of Prussia, delivered him to Prussian agents. He was taken to Berlin and lodged in the fortress of Magdeburg.

NO sooner was Treck locked in his dungeon than his active brain was at work planning escape. Tearing loose an 18-inch iron bar which fastened his table to the wall, he broke off the clinchings of nails, preserving the heads that he might replace them to avoid detection.

With these tools he raised the brick floor and uncovered a layer of earth. In boring a hole through the seven-foot wall he first removed a portion of a layer of brick and encountered a barrier of hewn stones. The bricks, both from the floor and the wall, were carefully numbered so that they could be replaced.

Treck disposed of the excavated dirt by grinding it to fine dust with his feet and blowing it out of his window at night.

Just as he was about to make a break through his tunnel a party of officers, under orders from the king, removed him to Star Fort.

He was loaded with chains, his body being encircled by an iron band attached to a chain which was fastened to a heavy iron bar. Later an iron collar was riveted around his neck.

The name of Treck was built in the wall and beneath his feet was a tombstone bearing his name and a death's head.

It was gruesome to think of, let alone behold. It is no wonder that thoughts of suicide almost overcame him at times.

Treck determined to try once more to dig his way out. The first step was to loosen his fetters. By continued effort he withdrew his hands from the handcuffs. Then he filed through the chain attached to the iron band around his body, made a chisel from a long nail, and cut through nine inches of oak floor planking, under which he struck a bed of sand. This sand he passed out to a sympathizing sentinel.

But after eight months of hard and painful labor his efforts proved in vain. There came a change of governors, and Treck was burdened with additional chains. Six months of illness followed.

Treck was finally released after 10 years of confinement because of the impression his ingenious attempts to escape made on Prince Ferdinand of Prussia.

After gaining his freedom, he wandered about Europe, finally marrying a wine merchant's daughter and settling down in France. In the turmoil of the French revolution he fell under suspicion and in 1794 he was guillotined.

THE courageous spirit of the pioneer-woman, who stood shoulder to shoulder with her husband in defying the wild dangers of the great south-west a few years ago, still lives!

This message has been carried to the far corners of the world only recently. Eleven desperate convicts escaped from the Kansas prison. Women's part in the reign of terror which followed, has proven it, without a doubt.

A pretty young Oklahoma girl beat one of the toughest of the escaped murderers into submission with the butt of her own pistol. Another woman, with calm, brave eyes, watched her husband send a bullet whistling by her head to kill one of the marauding felons who was using her for a shield.

Women were kidnapped as hostages, but they never showed fear. Farm wives faced the killers' guns and tricked the convicts, to save their loved ones. So the story goes, a tribute to womanhood!

If you saw this action in a wild-western film thriller, or if you read it in a novel, you would say: "Preposterous! Nothing like that could happen in these days!" But here it is on this page, a true story from real life, more thrilling, more exciting than any melodrama ever conceived by the wildest imagination!

By JACK MARTIN

EVEN in its beginning the fantastic reign of terror had a setting which might well have been picked out of a novel.

It was Memorial Day, and the prisoners at the Kansas State Prison, at Lansing, Kans., about thirty miles north of Kansas City, were given a rest from their week-day duties.

It was a hot, sultry day. The prisoners were herded into the yard to witness a baseball game between the American Legion teams of Leavenworth and Topeka, Kans.

There was nothing in the atmosphere of the prison yard to indicate what was brewing in the ranks of the assembled convicts. The prisoners apparently were giving all their attention to the perspiring athletes. The score stood at two all when Kirk Prather, the prison warden, entered the yard.

The warden stopped a moment to watch the game. A Topeka player stepped to the plate. The ball whizzed over. The batter swung and there was a sharp crack. The ball sailed high over the prison wall for a home run. The prisoners cheered lustily. Some of them joked: "Heh, I'll go out and get it!"

WITH furtive movements a prisoner stirred here and there. Three convicts crept up behind the unsuspecting warden. Suddenly a noose of wire dropped over his neck. A pistol jabbed his back. His arms were held tightly against his body.

In a voice the warden recognized as that of Wilbur Underhill a four-time murderer and the prison's most desperate killer, came the command to move.

"We're going out of here," Underhill hissed into the warden's ear. "And you're going with us. Unless you do as we say you're a goner."

The warden and two guards standing with him were forced to walk to the nearest guard house on top the prison wall. The warden must either obey or see his men shot down before his eyes. He chose to obey, and chance the capture of the desperadoes at a later point. Reaching the wall, the warden ordered the guard there to throw down his guns, and lower the trap door.

The six convicts with the warden now turned to the grandstand. "Come on, you guys," Underhill shouted. Five more convicts jumped to the ground and joined them. The remaining prisoners sat, wide-eyed, watching the proceedings.

The eleven convicts and their captives were now atop the wall. They threw down a rope. Warden Prather and Guards John Sherman and L. A. Laws were ordered to slide down the outside. The other guards were sent back to the prison yard with the message: "Tell everybody we'll kill the warden if we're followed."

The convicts paused a minute at the base of the wall near the prison garage. Alex Davis, negro trusty, was working there on a sedan owned by W. W. Woodson, superintendent of the prison farms. In the car sat Virginia Woodson, his pretty 15-year-old daughter.

The convicts ran toward the car, shouting to Miss Woodson to remain where she was. This schoolgirl was the first woman to defy them. She leaped out and ran. The convicts fired a volley after her. The negro trusty fell in back of her, to shield her from the bullets. Both escaped unharmed.

All eleven felons piled into the car. Warden Prather and the guards were forced to ride the running boards. The wild dash for freedom was well under way—as colorful a prison break as ever recorded in criminal history.

Probably no more desperate band of criminals ever set out to shoot their way to liberty. Seven of the eleven had figured in former prison escapes. Eight of them were serving life terms, three for murder. The rest were serving sentences ranging from 15 to 50 years for major crimes.

The six men who planned the break were: Wilbur Underhill, 30, murderer; Harvey Bailey, 45, super bank robber; Ed Davis, 30, bank robber; Frank Sawyer, 33, murderer; Jim Clark, 30, bank robber, and Bob Brady, 23, bank robber.

The five who accepted the invitation to join the break were: Kenneth Conn, 21, murderer; Lewis Bechtel, 25, highway robber; Alvie Payton, 21, bank robber; Clifford Dopson, 22, bank robber, and Billie Woods, 22, robber.

From the minute the desperadoes roared away from the prison in the stolen car, no life in that section of Kansas was safe. They headed for the famous "bad lands," just over the south-eastern Kansas boundary in Oklahoma, that uninhabited land of hills, gullies and caves which for years has been the favorite hiding-out place of western fugitives and desperadoes.

"YOU CAN KILL ME, BUT I'LL NEVER SIT ON YOUR LAP!" Said Louise Woods, 17 (Left). She and Louise Woods, 17, Kansas City Girls, Were Held Captive for Hours by the Fleeing Felons. They Defied Their Captors But Were Released Unharmed.

A few miles outside of Lansing, the convicts split up. The six who planned the break drove on with the three hostages. The other five surrounded an auto driven by M. J. Woods, of Kansas City. They forced Woods out. In the car with him were his wife, a partial cripple, his daughter, Louise, 17, and Cloris Wears, 17, a friend. The five convicts climbed in with the three women and drove off, leaving Woods standing in the road.

Here again the fortitude of the southwestern woman was shown. The two girls and Mrs. Woods were nearly frantic with fear. But did they let their captors know it? Not even by a flick of an eyelash or the slightest inflection of voice. One of the prisoners suggested to Miss Wears that she ride on his lap, the car was so crowded.

"Never!" she exclaimed. "You can kill me if you want to, but I'll never sit on the lap of a man like you!"

Don't get excited now, M'am," one of the prisoners replied. "You're lucky. No telling what might have happened to you if that other bunch had caught you. They're hard babies, they are."

The car sped on, with the women huddled in one corner. They drove for hours. When the gasoline supply ran low they stopped at a filling station, forced Mrs. Woods to buy a fresh supply. Toward nightfall they stopped at a farm house for food. They found the housewife alone.

"I don't want you around here," this brave woman calmly told them. "My husband will be home soon, and you probably would kill him. Get moving! I'm going to have company for supper."

They moved on. About 9 o'clock that evening they reached the farm home of William New, near Pleasanton, Kans. With leveled guns the convicts entered the house, covered New, and ordered his wife to prepare food for them and their hostages. Mrs. New carried on the tradition of bravery.

Exciting Scene a Few Minutes After Five Men Machine-Gunned to Death Five Other Men, Four of Them Federal Officers, in the Kansas City Union Depot Plaza Massacre. Several of the Escaped Convicts Were Accused

"Well, I never cooked before at the point of a gun, but I suppose I'll have to feed you brutes," she said. "But if you wake up my baby you won't get a bite."

The convicts and their captives ate heartily. Then the five prisoners decided to go on alone. They left the three hostages at the New home, unharmed. The following day they split up, each man going his own way.

By this time, all of eastern Kansas and northeastern Oklahoma was alarmed. People were keeping indoors, and guarding their homes, night and day. Bob Goodfellow, county clerk of Caddo County, Oklahoma, and his pretty sister, Lois, 20-year-old co-ed at Oklahoma A. & M. College, however, wanted to go riding, and riding they went.

This was June 4. The brother and sister were driving slowly along a little used country road, Lois at the wheel, when suddenly a roughly dressed, unshaven man, waving a pistol, leaped out in front of them. Lois pulled to a stop and the man climbed in. He identified himself as Frank Sawyer, murderer, one of the escaped felons. "Drive on and don't start anything or it'll be bad for you," he ordered, flourishing his weapon.

Lois, a real daughter of the Southwest, was unafraid. She started the car, drove a hundred yards and calmly mired the machine in a ditch along side the road. The three got out. Just then a car containing a sheriff and two deputies drove up. They were looking for escaped convicts they had heard were in the neighborhood.

Sawyer, lurking behind the car, grabbed Bob Goodfellow to protect him and opened fire on the sheriffs. They returned shot for shot. Goodfellow fell, slightly wounded in the leg. And another girl of Oklahoma showed what stuff brave women are made of.

SHE leaped on Sawyer, scratching, pulling his hair, choking him. Bullets whistled around her. Sawyer vainly tried to turn his gun on her. The viciousness of her attack unsteady him and in a second the sheriffs pounced onto him. His pistol dropped to the ground. Lois seized it and clubbed him over the head with the butt until he fell, dazed.

"I wasn't afraid of him," Lois smiled later. "I just wanted to hurt him and make sure he was captured, after Bob was wounded."

It was just ten days later, on June 14, when the next installment of this wild-western thriller was written across the front pages of the newspapers. The good citizens of Oklahoma and Kansas were still apprehensive of the danger which might fall on them at any moment.

Perhaps it was this apprehension which moved Isaac McCarty, the young cashier of the Labette County State Bank, at Altamont, Kans., probably has no equal in viciousness on the part of any single band of criminals.

Warden Prather and Guards Sherman and Laws were turned loose the same night they were taken. Thirty-six hours later came the tragic news of the death of Otto L. Durkee, night policeman at Chetopa, Kans. He had surprised Underhill and his fellows robbing a tire store, and had engaged them in a gunfight. He was shot down with a dozen slugs in his body, but not before he had emptied his gun.

watched a home in Wenona, Ill., for two weeks, and finally they captured Mrs. Frank Nash, pretty young widow of the slain prisoner.

She was taken to Kansas City and charged with obstructing justice in hiding facts concerning the massacre. The agents also arrested Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Farmer, of Joplin, Mo. It was charged someone had telephoned them of Nash's arrest in Hot Springs, and had arranged with them to have the Underhill-Bailey gang on hand at the depot.

On July 28, Mrs. Nash and the Farmers were charged with first degree murder for their alleged part in the massacre. Later, however, the murder charges against Mrs. Nash were dropped, and she was released under $2,500 bond on the lesser charge of obstructing justice. As this was written the Farmers were still held for first degree murder.

There is one more sensational crime charged to this band of ex-convicts. They have been accused as the kidnapers who on July 22 seized Charles F. Urschel, wealthy Oklahoma City oil man, and held him captive until July 31. Urschel's brave wife, calmly working against great odds to free her husband, is claimed to have paid $200,000 ransom for his release. This is called by authorities the highest ransom ever paid for kidnaping in this country.

THE next climax came when Government agents ferreted out Harvey Bailey in his Texas hide-out, and arrested him before he had an opportunity to reach for a machine-gun and pistols resting beside him. Ten other persons, none members of the prison break gang, also were taken into custody. Bailey was charged with engineering the Kansas City massacre, and also the Urschel kidnaping. The house where he was hiding was the house where Urschel was held. Some of the $200,000 Urschel ransom was found in his pockets, it was claimed. The ten others were charged as accomplices.

The capture of Bailey was sensational. Urschel, while being held a prisoner in the cabin, noted the daily passing of an air-mail plane overhead. One Sunday he missed it, and noted the date. Federal agents checked air-mail schedules until they found a pilot who missed a trip on that date. From the hour this pilot regularly passed the cabin, the agents soon found the hideout. A few days after Bailey was taken government men and police sprang an ambush near Chicago which they hoped would catch Underhill. But some way he escaped.

It is the Government theory that probably the Underhill-Bailey gang split up, after they divided their share of the $200,000 they got from Mrs. Urschel. Residents of Kansas and Oklahoma certainly hope they have. Individually they could not make the raids which have terrorized that whole countryside.

The Government's drag-net is out for the remaining members of the gang. It is certain they will all be caught eventually. And when they are, the Kansas Prison break will be marked off, a defeat for the criminals. It must be so if modern society is to survive.

to whisper to his wife as he opened the bank that morning: "I have a hunch. I'm going up to the gun-room."

McCarty had seen a car containing two suspicious looking men drive up in front of the bank. He climbed up to a curtained niche above the back vault where a shotgun and rifle were kept for emergencies.

The two men approached the teller's cage. Suddenly one leveled a gun at Mrs. McCarty. "Hands up!" Three men, the only other occupants of the bank, were herded together and forced to lie on the floor.

THE robbers scooped money into sacks and turned to go. "We'll take along the girl," one said.

McCarty heard him. He pushed aside the curtain which hid him, poked out the shotgun barrel and fired once. A bandit fell.

Just then Robert Schooley, standing in the doorway of a garage across the street, began firing at the tires on the bandits' car. Apparently the unwounded bandit thought the shot which dropped his pal came from outside. He ducked behind a counter, pulled Mrs. McCarty down beside him.

McCarty could see the head of the bandit over his wife's shoulder. He knew he couldn't fire the shotgun without hitting her. He seized the rifle, levelled it. His wife's head was a scant six inches from his target. What if he missed and hit her? His finger closed on the trigger.

The shot was true. The bandit fell back with a bullet in his head. McCarty fired once more. The bullet found the bandit's heart. The man was dead. The other one died a few days later.

They were identified as Kenneth Conn and Alvie Payton, two of the five who had split up after freeing the three women hostages. Apparently this five erred when they parted. Conn and Payton were killed by McCarty. Lewis Bechtel, Billy Woods and Clifford Dopson had been captured, as had also Frank Sawyer, who had left the Underhill gang only to run afoul of Lois Goodfellow. This accounted for all but the four men with Underhill. Now we will see how they had been hiding.

The fleeing felon who had dubbed Underhill and his companions "hard babies," spoke the truth. They left a trail of bloodshed and robbery en route to their "bad lands" hide-out which

THE party was met at the depot by Federal Agents R. E. Vetterli and Raymond Caffrey. Frank Hermanson and W. J. Grooms, Kansas City detectives were with them.

The eight men walked quietly across the station plaza to a waiting auto. Suddenly two pistol shots rang out. Then came the deadly rattle of a machine-gun. Glass crashed. Lead whistled and whined through the air. The officers toppled over like tea-pins. The shooting lasted scarcely a minute. A motor car roared through the plaza, and carried the killers to a safe escape.

Of the eight men in the party, five lay dead. They were Otto Reed, Frank Hermanson, W. J. Grooms, Raymond Caffrey and their prisoner, Frank Nash. Agent Lackey was critically wounded. Agent Vetterli was wounded in the arm and Agent Smith alone escaped unscathed.

In the investigation which followed it was claimed that Harvey Bailey, Underhill's lieutenant, manned the machine-gun. The other escaped convicts were accomplices. The shooting had been planned to free Nash. The ex-prisoners were deeply indebted to him, because it was claimed he had smuggled them the guns they used in their break to liberty.

The full force of the United States Government was set after the killers. Government agents

When Justice Triumphed

By PETER LEVINS.

THE murder of Rose Gendler was the start of a case of jumbled clues and contradictions. The exact motive remains a mystery.

Miss Gendler, 22, and exceedingly attractive, was a leader in the social life of the Jewish colony of Rock Island, Ill., where she lived with her mother and stepfather, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Mark. Her character was spotless; under the cruel glare of a rigid investigation nothing was uncovered to mar her good name. She had no steady suitor and no known vices.

She had inherited a little money and some real estate from her father's estate; she owned the house in which she lived with her mother and stepfather, who operated a small broom factory. When jobs were available she worked, but in the past two years she rarely was called. This was as she wished, for she believed that girls supporting their families should have what jobs there were.

However, on the night of December 21, 1932, she was at work in the Parker department store in Davenport, Iowa, just across the Mississippi river from Rock Island. Rose had been visiting friends in Pittsburgh, Pa., and was called to help out in the Christmas rush. She served as head of the toy department, a job she had performed well in former years.

On that night of the 21st she left the store at 9:30 o'clock and started home. She was seen to get aboard a street car and later was observed en route to Rock Island.

But she didn't reach home.

When midnight arrived with no sign of her, Mrs. Mark called up the police. Rose was not the type to remain out late without informing her mother. Mrs. Mark feared that she had met with an accident. But the police had no report of an accident. They tried to reassure the mother, saying that no doubt the girl would arrive home at any minute.

But several hours more passed. Mrs. Mark paced the floor. Police officers appeared and began a search.

At 4 a. m. they found a clue—a note pinned on the back door of the Mark home, demanding $2,000 ransom.

What, kidnapped? The police were amazed. Why should Rose Gendler be kidnapped for ransom? This was no wealthy family. There were plenty of other families in town better able to pay a $2,000 ransom. The officers scratched their heads and awaited the next communication from the kidnappers.

It was not long before there was another development. Rose Gendler was found at 8 a. m.—dead.

The crushed and battered body was discovered stuffed head first into a gunnysack, lying on the ice of Rock River under a bridge, near Moline, on highway 80. It bore numerous wounds, including several deep gashes on the head. Apparently the killer had dropped the body from the bridge in the expectation that it would plunge through the ice and remain hidden until spring.

Police suspected at once, since her undergarments had been torn, that Rose had been the victim of an attacker. The medical report, however, stated that she had not been assaulted.

Officers questioned the family, hoping to unearth some hidden fact that might set them on the trail of the killer. They talked to the mother, stepfather and stepbrothers; also to the Marks' good friends.

friends, the Sol Meyers, who lived on the same street two blocks away. The Meyers, and their son, Maurice, who had known Rose since girlhood, hurried to the Mark home as soon as they heard the news.

But nothing could be uncovered that seemed helpful. The victim Rose had led an exemplary life.

Officers asked regarding a great amount of money Rose was believed to have had in her possession. Mr. Mark admitted that she girl had staked them all to this house in which they lived, but as for cash, no. He said practically all her inheritance was tied up in real estate.

The Meyers took part in the interviews with the police. Twenty-five-year-old Maurice Meyer, who was half-owner of an overall laundry in Moline, was particularly helpful. He was able to give the police an intimate picture of the girl's splendid character and standing in the community.

Meanwhile the search had spread out with the police of Moline and Davenport co-operating with the Rock Island authorities. But the investigation, for the first week, got nowhere.

In their desperation—and perhaps it wasn't all desperation—the police decided to subject the stepfather, two stepbrothers, Sol Meyer and his son to tests by the so-called lie detector from the crime detection laboratory in Chicago. This device and its findings may not stand up in a court of law, but there are times when psychology of such a procedure brings results.

The dead girl's family protested vigorously against this move, not so much for themselves as for the Meyers. They said it was a shame that Mr. Meyer and his son should be put to such an indignity. But the officers pointed out that no one could be spared. It was their intention to investigate the alibi of every one who might possibly be connected with the case.

For two days in January the group was questioned, with the lie detector registering their emotional reactions, heartbeats and blood pressure.

And the results? They were never made public. The reason—Maurice Meyer suddenly left town, disappeared.

Flight being an indication of guilt, the police concentrated on checking up on the young man. His alibi had been that he was in bed asleep at the time Rose met her death. The police now sought to break this down. They also took samples of the dust in the trunk he used to collect soiled overalls, as well as sweepings from the back room of his laundry, for comparison with the dirt and dust on the gunnysack.

Two results came out of this phase of the investigation. 1. The police learned that Rose Gendler had telephoned Maurice from the Parker store the night of the crime and asked him to meet her. 2. The crime detection laboratory reported that particles of dust taken from the trunk and laundry tallied with particles on the sack in which the body was found.

Convinced now that they had struck the right track, the police prepared to file a murder charge against Meyer. Also the word went forth over the country that he was wanted in Rock Island.

Then, abruptly, the suspect returned. He appeared voluntarily at police headquarters, said he had gone to Los Angeles, but had decided to come back and relate everything he knew about the tragedy.

"I admit I got a call from Rose that night," he said. "Why didn't you mention it?" asked Sheriff Fred Schlueter.

"I felt so tough about the whole thing—it just broke me all up. If I had met her she wouldn't have died."

"Oh, so you didn't meet her?" "Why, no! You don't suppose I'd come back and—"

"Listen, Maurice, if you didn't kill her, you know who did, because we know you had her body and that sack in your delivery truck the night she disappeared. What do you say to that?"

The statement shook the young man's calm. "What are you talking about?" he exclaimed. "You're just trying to trick me. I haven't any idea how Rose died. Why, I thought the world of her! Ever since we were kids we—"

"All this won't get you anywhere," said the sheriff. "We have the facts. If you know what's good for you, you'll tell us everything."

Meyer began to look very worried. He made several more attempts to convince the officers that he knew nothing about the crime, but they didn't seem interested in his denials. They appeared very sure of their ground. Finally he cried:

"All right, I'll explain just what happened. But don't get the idea that I killed her. You don't think I'd kill her, do you?"

"What happened?" "She hurt herself in a fall. It was all an accident. I was frightened, see? So I threw the body off the bridge because I was afraid no one would believe me if I said I didn't kill her. That's the honest truth!"

All efforts to make him admit anything more failed. When the session was over the police had this statement:

Following is the text of the statement of Maurice Meyer, of Rock Island, in connection with the death of Miss Rose Gendler. The statement was made in the presence of Sheriff Fred R. Schlueter and Deputies Ray B. Haddon and Glenn Haddick and is:

Solution of Last Week's Puzzle.

"February 15, 1933. "I, Maurice Meyer, make the following statement of my own free will, knowing this may be used against me in court. The following is the exact manner in which Rose Gendler met her death.

"Rose Gendler called me at 5:30 p. m., Wednesday, December 21, 1932, from Davenport, at my shop in Moline, asking me if I was going to be in Davenport that evening, to which I replied 'no'.

"I left the shop to go home and arrived at 8 o'clock. Had supper and lay down until about 8:30. Then got up, went downtown to Hickey Brothers' cigar store, at 19th street and Third avenue, Rock Island, and left there about 9:30 to go home. Upon reaching 15th street and Third avenue, I recognized Rose in the street car and there being cars ahead of me, I let them pass and then followed the street car to 17th street and Second avenue, to pick up Rose to take her home. Then driving down 17th street, Rose mentioned that she wanted to see a picture I had in the shop, so we drove to the shop.

"Arriving at the shop, I drove in through the rear entrance and walked through the shop to the office and got the picture, and also my watch which I had left there that day. Upon returning to the truck I found Rose had gotten out of the truck to go into the building and had fallen on the corner of the brick wall. I tried to revive her immediately and saw that I could not, so I picked her up, carried her into the shop and then tried again to revive her, which I failed to do.

"I then became panicky and frightened, thinking I might be held responsible for her death. Then I bound and gagged her, put her in a sack, then carried her out to the truck, put her in and then drove around for a while trying to determine what to do. I then decided to dispose of her body. I then drove out to the Rock River bridge, route 80, stopped my truck and then dropped her body off onto the ice.

"I then drove back to Moline and on the way decided to write a ransom note to avert suspicion on myself, if any would arise. I went back to the shop and gave the ransom note. I then went to the Mark residence and placed the note on the back door and then drove back downtown to the De Luxe restaurant and had a hot lemonade and then drove home and went to bed.

"I make this statement freely and voluntarily. I have not been promised anything that caused me to make this statement, nor have I been abused by any one that caused me to make this statement.

"This statement is true and made knowing that it will be used against me.

"MAURICE R. MEYER. "Witnesses—Fred R. Schlueter, Ray Haddon and Glenn Haddick. "Crushed Lung Cause of Death. "The police were not inclined to believe this version of the tragedy, but further efforts to break the prisoner's silence so the state had to launch its trial without a murder confession. After all, it was not impossible that everything had happened exactly as Meyer described.

He was tried before Judge Leonard Telleen, in Rock Island, the defense waiving the right to be tried by a jury. The taking of testimony consumed one month. The prosecution brought out through medical testimony that Rose had not been dead when she was dropped from the bridge, that the head injury had not caused death; rather that the immediate cause was a crushed lung. The experts admitted that the head injury might have caused death over a period of days, but presence of blood in the pleural cavity after the lung was torn by the fall indicated, they said, that the girl's death resulted from being thrown from the bridge.

The old argument of whether blood circulates after a person is dead developed, the defense contending that blood in the damaged lung was evidence that Rose was alive when she struck the ice.

In an effort to establish a motive, the state stressed the fact that the girl's underwear had been torn. The prosecutor argued that Meyer had attempted an attack, had been repulsed, and had lost his head in a frenzy of frustration and rage. In this sudden tempest of anger, said the prosecutor, the young man had struck her, knocked her unconscious. And then, to save himself from

NIGHT FLIGHT.

Robineau guessed at his meaning and went silently to the office. "I am still the president of this company," Daudet shouted. "The plane is not to go. I order it. You can't refuse. You're only the general manager."

"And now let me tell you something—I started this thing when I'm going to go through with it! What if the plane is lost—suppose they're both dead—it still doesn't matter. The other ship came through. Over the Andes. And the one for Paraguay will be there any minute now. Isn't that proof enough it can be done? A cyclone doesn't happen every night. The European plane will have no trouble. Even if it does, I'll still go on! You can't stop all the clocks in the world from ticking—keep time from going on—stop things from changing."

"Enough, M'sieu, I'll not listen to another word—" Daudet began, and then broke off as a clerk came into the room and announced:

"The Paraguay plane has landed on schedule."

"It makes no difference," Daudet said, as Riviere turned to him with a smile. "The European plane must not be allowed."

"I had hoped to convince you," Riviere said. "But as I can't I may as well tell you. The European mail has already left. You see, M'sieu, as general manager, I at least anticipated this."

Outside there was the roar of a plane motor. Robineau had understood his superior's hint. The plane for the west-to-east trip had been started ahead of schedule. It came flying over the field, wings blinking through the storm, and then disappeared into the darkness, its motor roaring a triumphant crescendo. The night flight would succeed.

Let the state disprove the young man's story.

Judge Telleen reached his verdict May 9. Meyer's face lighted up as the judge began dismissing indictments. But as the court continued reading his findings, the flicker of a smile in the young man's face vanished and was replaced by a look of anguish and terror.

"To the indictments charging murder," stated Judge Telleen, "the defendant is found guilty."

On June 24 he sentenced Meyer to 90 years at hard labor. Meyer sobbed loud and loudly. "I didn't kill Rose!" he cried. "She slipped on the ice and fell. Then I went nuts. The whole world is in for a life in prison!"

A FINESSE FOR SAFETY.

BY ELY CULBERTSON.

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

AS A USUAL thing a suit of nine cards from which the Queen is missing should be played for the drop. In other words, the Ace-King should be led out in the hope that the adverse cards are divided 2-2 and that consequently the Queen will fall. However, this is not a hard and fast rule but simply a general one.

There are two occasions when the finesse is the better play. The first case occurs when the bidding and first few plays have disclosed the fact that the distribution is unusual. When this has been discovered the odds favor a 3-1 break much more than they do a 2-2 break. The second occasion is much more interesting and involves a type of safety play. This play is illustrated by the following hand, which was played by Mr. A. H. Morehead, of New York city.

South, Dealer.

East-West vulnerable.

The bidding:

South West North East

4♠ Pass Pass Pass

The bidding was quite normal in spite of the fact that everybody bid when it came his turn. Even though East and West were vulnerable their distribution warranted some defensive measures.

The opening lead was the 3 of diamonds, which Mr. Morehead immediately marked as a singleton. East had bid the suit and the only card lower than the 3 was the deuce, which he held in his own hand, and then laid down the Ace of Spades. When this he decided that it was a good idea to get rid of the high hearts in the dummy and consequently cashed the Ace-King. He now led a low spade from Dummy, and East, of course, played the 8-spot. Mr. Morehead's first impulse was to play the King and hope for the drop, but a moment's reflection showed him that this might easily turn out to be a losing play. If West should show out he could then lead a heart and ruff in the Dummy but after this he would be unable to return to his own hand and East would be able to pull the last trump out of Dummy with the Queen. With this distribution, therefore, he would be sure to lose 4 tricks—one in each suit.

He now considered the finesse and saw almost immediately that this play was an absolute safety play. If he played the Knave and West won with the Queen, all the trumps would be gone. He would still have two hearts remaining which he could trump in Dummy no matter what the opponents did and he would simply lose one diamond trick and one club trick in addition to the trump trick which he was giving up. If, on the other hand, the finesse held, he could afford to give up one of his losing heart tricks and still be sure of making the contract.

Reasoning thus, he took the spade finesse, and when it held, laid down the King of spades. He then ruffed one of his losing hearts in Dummy and conceded three tricks to the opponents. This particular type of finesse seems simple enough when it is explained but I do not think that there are many players who would appreciate the whole beauty of the situation.

Defensive play has not yet reached the stage where a player is capable of figuring out every play eight or nine tricks from the end. This is as it should be because otherwise Contract would degenerate into a sort of Double Dummy proposition and the whole charm of the game would be lost.

The following hand was played in four spades by South and was played extremely well. South made his contract, and after the hand was over, a line of defense was discovered which would have beaten the hand one trick. All players agreed, however, that the play was absolutely Double Dummy play and could not have been conceived by anybody.

SMART WINTER ENSEMBLES

*Striking Afternoon Costumes That
and Indoor Occasions*

EVERY Winter for the past few seasons we have greeted with enthusiasm the return of the dressy, fur-trimmed ensemble. It has its practical advantages, too, this stunning costume. It can be worn with comfort during the first crisp Fall days and will do service right on through until the early days of Spring.

Then, too, many of the new ensembles boast full-length, slim silhouette coats, that can be worn separately and do double duty as an extra wrap.

Furs are lavishly used for trimming this season. Fabrics are novel and interesting. Paris is dividing honors between rough and smooth weaves. Ribbed wools and diagonal duvetyne are novelties, but do not seem to be winning great favor.

One of the more popular of the smooth fabrics is broadcloth, which is being shown in both mat and shining satin finishes. You'll cheer when you see the new jerseys that are absolutely guaranteed not to lose their shape. They're deceiving in appearance, too; some of them resembling velvet, some duvetyne.

The girl whose budget is of necessity limited will be wise to include a Winter ensemble in her wardrobe. Worn with the coat for street wear, it is always smart. It can be put on in the morning and not taken off until nightfall, for without the coat one can go right through the day from the shopping tour to the lunch date and right on to the tea and dinner engagements.

STRIKING NEW COSTUMES

FOR early Winter wear. Below, at left, a stunning suit of black broadcloth featuring a three-quarter coat that is slightly fitted. The rippled shawl collar is edged with a Persian lamb band and the sleeves are slightly full above the elbow. A rust-colored satin blouse with a high draped neckline is worn with it. For town and sports wear we suggest the brown suit of diagonal tweed. Note its hip-length belted jacket and the rich tan kid trimming. The straight skirt boasts an inverted pleat at the front. Another rather sporty model is this suit of green diagonal wool with a deep cape collar of leopard. The seven-eighths coat flares slightly. It is belted and has two slashed pockets.

THE SWAGGER SUIT

KAMUR

by EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

FOR CENTURIES THE IBEKS, A TRIBE OF FIERCE MOUNTAINEERS, HAD MAINTAINED THEIR INDEPENDENCE.

THEN IN THE DAYS OF THE OLD PHARAOH, WITH THE RISE OF THEIR GIGANTIC PRINCE KAMUR THEY DARED RISK OPEN WARFARE WITH THE EGYPTIANS. ALMOST SINGLE-HANDED, KAMUR PUT THE EGYPTIAN ARMY TO ROUT.

SPREADING TERROR, KAMUR INVADDED THE PALACE. BUT AT SIGHT OF NIKOTRIS, HE HALTED, SPELLBOWN BY HER BEAUTY.

AS THE PRICE OF PEACE HE DEMANDED OF PHARAOH THE HAND OF THE YOUNG PRINCESS.

READILY HE AGREED TO DISMISS HIS ARMY WHILE TERMS OF PEACE WERE DISCUSSED.

THEN, WHEN HE WAS ALONE AND UNARMED, THE EGYPTIANS SEIZED HIM.

WHILE HE LANGUISHED IN A DUNGEON, THE LEGEND OF HIS TERRIFIC STRENGTH GREW IN THE LAND. HE WAS THE MONSTER.

ON FESTIVAL DAYS HE WAS SHOWN, CHAINED AND UNKEMPT, TO THE PEOPLE.

WHEN, AFTER THE OLD PHARAOH'S DEATH, KAMUR FINALLY ESCAPED, HE CARRIED NIKOTRIS, WHO HAD SINCE BECOME QUEEN, OFF IN HIS ARMS.

IT WAS KAMUR WHO FELLED TARZAN WITH AN UNSEEN BLOW WHEN HE DISCOVERED THE APE-MAN ON HIS TRAIL. NOW HE SEIZED THE APE-MAN'S KNIFE TO STRIKE THE DEATH-BLOW! NEXT WEEK: FOR LOVE OF THE QUEEN.
